EXAM TECHNIQUE

- Do not skip any of the material in the syllabus.
- Read each question very carefully.
- Double-check your answer before committing yourself to it.
- Answer every question – if you do not know an answer, you don't lose anything by guessing. Think carefully before you guess.
- If you are answering a multiple-choice question, eliminate first those answers that you know are wrong. Then choose the most appropriate answer from those that are left.
- Don't panic if you realise you've answered a question incorrectly. Getting one question wrong will not mean the difference between passing and failing

Computer-based exams – tips

- Do not attempt a CBE until you have completed all study material relating to it.
- On the ACCA website there is a CBE demonstration. It is ESSENTIAL that you attempt this before your real CBE. You will become familiar with how to move around the CBE screens and the way that questions are formatted, increasing your confidence and speed in the actual exam.
- Be sure you understand how to use the software before you start the exam. If in doubt, ask the assessment centre staff to explain it to you.
- Questions are displayed on the screen and answers are entered using keyboard and mouse. At the end of the exam, you are given a certificate showing the result you have achieved.
- The CBE question types are as follows:
 - Multiple choice – where you are required to choose one answer from a list of options provided by clicking on the appropriate 'radio button'
 - Multiple response – where you are required to select more than one response from the options provided by clicking on the appropriate tick boxes (typically choose two options from the available list)
 - Multiple response matching – where you are required to indicate a response to a number of related statements by clicking on the 'radio button' which corresponds to the appropriate response for each statement
 - Number entry – where you are required to key in a response to a question shown on the screen.
- Note that the CBE variant of the examination will not require you to input text, although you may be required to choose the correct text from options available.
- You need to be sure you know how to answer questions of this type before you sit the exam, through practice.

EXAM-SPECIFIC INFORMATION

THE EXAM

FORMAT OF THE COMPUTER-BASED EXAM

| | Number of marks |
|-------------------------------------------------------|------------------------|
| 30 compulsory objective test questions (2 marks each) | 60 |

KAPLAN'S RECOMMENDED REVISION APPROACH

QUESTION PRACTICE IS THE KEY TO SUCCESS

Success in professional examinations relies upon you acquiring a firm grasp of the required knowledge at the tuition phase. In order to be able to do the questions, knowledge is essential.

However, the difference between success and failure often hinges on your exam technique on the day and making the most of the revision phase of your studies.

The Kaplan study text is the starting point, designed to provide the underpinning knowledge to tackle all questions. However, in the revision phase, pouring over text books is not the answer.

Kaplan Online progress tests help you consolidate your knowledge and understanding and are a useful tool to check whether you can remember key topic areas.

Kaplan pocket notes are designed to help you quickly revise a topic area, however you then need to practice questions. There is a need to progress to full exam standard questions as soon as possible, and to tie your exam technique and technical knowledge together.

The importance of question practice cannot be over-emphasised.

The recommended approach below is designed by expert tutors in the field, in conjunction with their knowledge of the examiner.

The approach taken for the fundamental exams is to revise by topic area.

You need to practice as many questions as possible in the time you have left.

OUR AIM

Our aim is to get you to the stage where you can attempt exam standard questions confidently, to time, in a closed book environment, with no supplementary help (i.e. to simulate the real examination experience).

Practising your exam technique on real past examination questions, in timed conditions, is also vitally important for you to assess your progress and identify areas of weakness that may need more attention in the final run up to the examination.

The approach below shows you which questions you should use to build up to coping with exam standard question practice, and references to the sources of information available should you need to revisit a topic area in more detail.

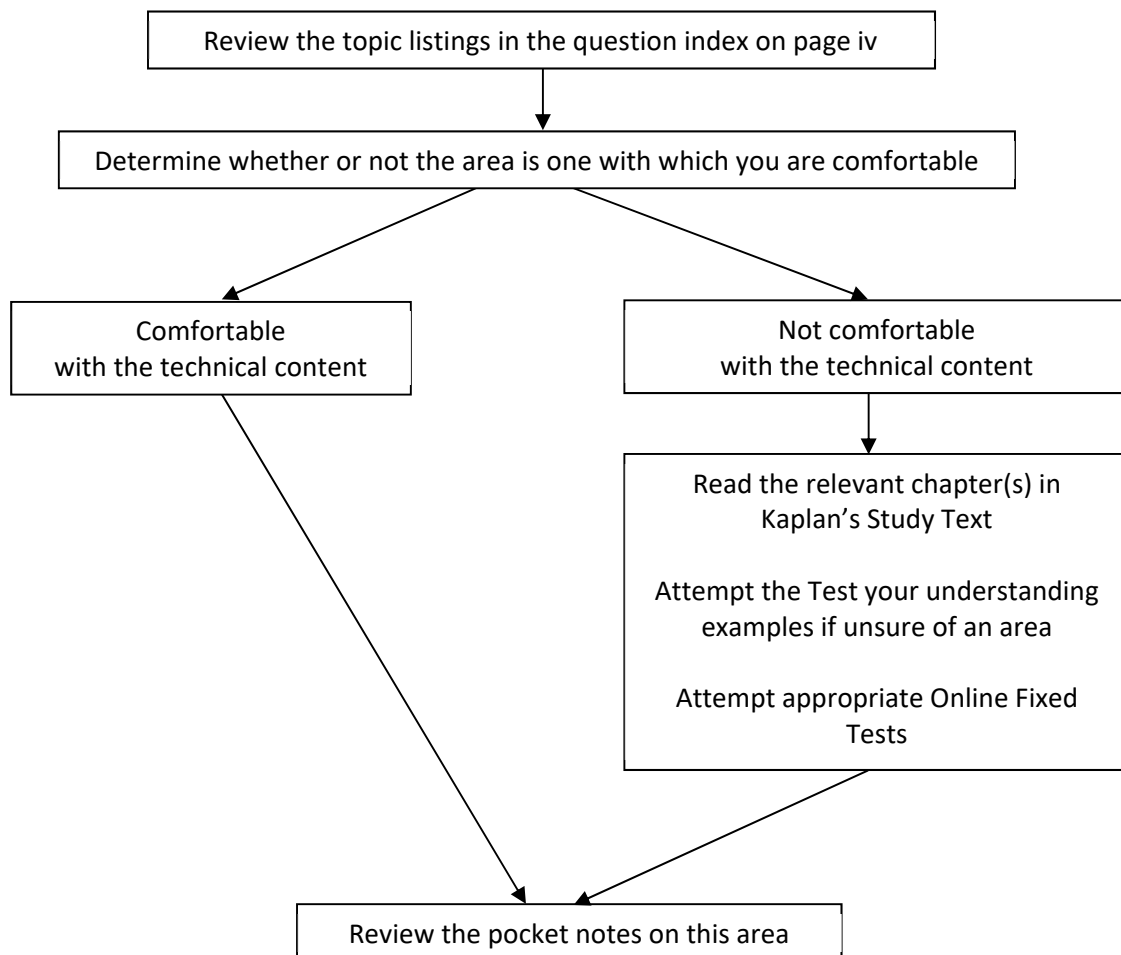

Remember that in the real examination, all you have to do is:

- attempt all questions required by the exam
- only spend the allotted time on each question, and
- get at least 50% right!

Try and practice this approach on every question you attempt from now to the real exam.

THE KAPLAN BUSINESS AND TECHNOLOGY REVISION PLAN

Stage 1: Assess areas of strengths and weaknesses

Stage 2: Practice questions

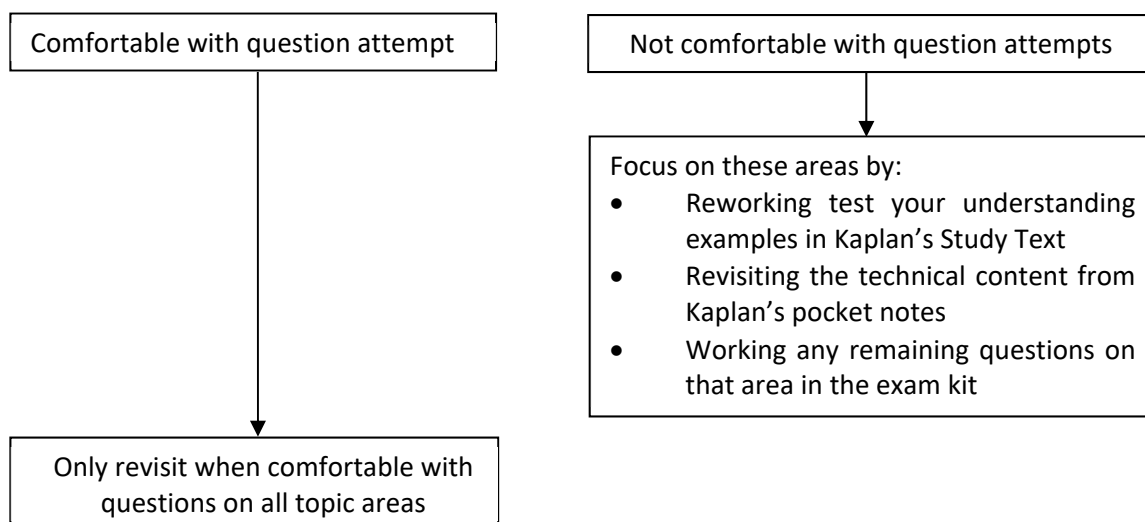

Ensure that you revise all syllabus areas as questions could be asked on anything.

Try to avoid referring to text books and notes and the model answer until you have completed your attempt.

Try to answer the question in the allotted time.

Review your attempt with the model answer. If you got the answer wrong, can you see why? Was the problem a lack of knowledge or a failure to understand the question fully?

Decide on your best course of action using the boxes below.

Stage 3: Final pre-exam revision

We recommend that you attempt at least one two hour mock examination containing a set of previously unseen exam standard questions.

It is important that you get a feel for the breadth of coverage of a real exam without advanced knowledge of the topic areas covered – just as you will expect to see on the real exam day.

Ideally this mock should be sat in timed, closed book, real exam conditions and could be:

- 2 FFD Co is a large national manufacturer of animal feed based in country T. FFD sells dried food – primarily for chickens and sheep. This is not a competitive market and FFD's large number of small farmer customers have little alternative but to purchase FFD's products for their animals. The farming industry is struggling in country T with farmers earning very low margins and many being forced out of business.

The Government of country T has publicly expressed concerns about the state of the national farming industry and has vowed to do whatever is necessary to protect farmers from what one minister has referred to as 'money-making corporations that are making excessive profits from farmers.'

FFD's shares are mainly held by individual investors – many of whom have invested a significant amount of money into FFD. No one shareholder in FFD has more than 4% of the total share capital of the company.

FFD's employees are largely unskilled and are not members of any union.

FFD is currently considering raising its prices by around 15% to improve its margins. It has identified four main stakeholder groups who may be affected by the decision. These have been allocated to the quadrants in the matrix shown below.

This analysis has uncovered a number of major issues within Country B that PH needs to plan for.

Which FOUR of the following statements would be most likely to be classified as 'Political' factors within a PEST analysis?

- A Country B's government has announced additional expenditure on motorways and roads
- B Residents of country B are becoming more environmentally conscious
- C New internet systems are available that will simplify the process of booking train tickets

- D New health and safety regulations are being planned for all rail operators in country B
- E Increased congestion on the roads of country B as residents travel more
- F Additional one-off taxes on rail operators are being proposed in country B to help pay for road upgrades

- (b) PH has recently had a number of problems with employees taking the company to court after leaving their jobs. To ensure that the company is not guilty of any wrongdoing, it has investigated four recent leavers and discovered the following:

Employee 1 was employed as part of PH's IT department. The department was recently reorganised and PH felt that this worker's role was no longer needed.

Employee 2 had originally been contracted to work 15 hours a week. Her manager at PH had recently insisted that she had to work 25 hours a week, which led to the employee resigning.

Employee 3 recently joined a trade union. Her manager stated that this made her 'a troublemaker' and dismissed her.

Employee 4 was dismissed for no longer having the technical competence for his job (which had recently been significantly changed in a reorganisation of PH's operations). Employee 4 had a three month notice period in his contract, but his manager told him he was only going to be given two weeks' notice.

PH is aware that employees may face various types of dismissal.

- 4 (a) BVO is a small business, which manufactures and sells a number of products, including product X (a relatively low-value item). BVO has recently been considering its pricing policy for this product.

It has estimated that if it raises the current selling price (per unit) of product X from $1 to $1.50, annual demand will drop from 100,000 units to 90,000 units.

BVO is uncertain of the implications of this for its product, or what might be causing the current level of price elasticity.

Which FOUR of the following options could reasonably be inferred from the above information?

- A The price elasticity of demand (PED) for product X is 5
- B Product X is unit elastic
- C Product X may be a product that customers buy out of habit
- D Product X may have few, if any, substitutes
- E The price elasticity of demand (PED) for product X is 0.28
- F Product X may see a sharper fall in demand if the price rise lasts for a long period.
- G Product X has a price elasticity of demand (PED) of 0.2
- H Product X would be more profitable if the price was cut rather than raised

- 5 (a) Y Co sells health and home insurance. Y does not have any physical stores – instead it has a number of call centres. Customers make contact with the company and purchase insurance policies over the phone.

Y's call centre management structure is extremely bureaucratic, with many levels of management. This results in Y suffering high payroll costs, leading to it having to increase its prices to customers, reducing its ability to compete in the insurance market.

However, Y has recently started to introduce new computerised systems for its call centre staff, which has led to increased efficiency. Staff members are able to deal with significantly more calls than previously and less skill is required by the employees, as much of the complex work is now undertaken by the new system.

Y is now looking to see what changes it can make to the call centres as a result of introducing the new IT system. It is considering three options.

Classify the following issues as relating to either delaying, downsizing or outsourcing.

| Issue | Delaying | Downsizing | Outsourcing |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------|-------------------|--------------------|
| Could allow third party organisations access to Y's information and processes, leading to loss of competitive advantage. | | | |
| Keeping the current management structure, but reducing the number of staff could lead to demotivation among the remaining workers. | | | |
| Eliminating several levels of unnecessary management to reduce Y's costs, leading to lower prices for customers. | | | |
| This is likely to lead to a more 'team-working' approach, where employees take on different roles in different teams, as necessary. | | | |

- 6 MBV is a manufacturer of fine furniture based in country G. MBV's managers have identified that the company's results for the past three years have been declining. They feel that this is due to changes in the external environment – in particular within MBV's industry.

The managers wish to use Porter's five forces model to understand the problems the company is facing, but are uncertain of its proper use. They have undertaken some analysis and identified a number of key issues (summarised below) but cannot decide which of the five forces each issue relates to.

| | | Level | |
|-------|--------------------|-------|-----|
| | | High | Low |
| Force | New entrants | A | B |

For EACH of the following issues, identify which force they relate to and whether the strength of the force is high or low, by choosing ONE letter from A to J.

| Issue | A | B | C | D | E | F | G | H | I | J |
| MBV's employees are heavily unionised, making it difficult for the company to change their terms and conditions. | | | | | | | | | | |

POL is long-established and has a very experienced management team. Many years of high profits have enabled the company to build up significant cash reserves.

The market for bottled water has been slow-growing for many years in country H, with consumers switching to flavoured waters, which are not offered by POL. Nearby country I (which POL does not currently operate in) is seeing significant growth in this market.

One of POL's managers has recently noted an article in a popular newspaper in country H which suggested that bottled water may be harmful to health due to high levels of toxins from the plastic bottles the water is sold in. POL is one of the few bottled water manufacturers to sell its water in glass bottles, which the article suggests is safe for consumption.

- 22 (a) TGD offers life insurance through a team of door-to-door salesmen in country P. This is a highly regulated industry in country P – the salesmen must ask specific questions and make specific statements to ensure that the policies they sell are legally binding. Any failure to do this can void the insurance policy and could in some cases lead to prosecution of TGD by the Government of country P. TGD has regular audits of its practices and records by the Government.

Currently TGD relies on a training programme for its salesmen which teaches them the rules and regulations they have to follow. However, in recent months TGD has discovered that a number of policies have been sold without all of the appropriate rules being followed. TGD is therefore considering the launch of a series of formal procedures that all salesmen must follow. This will be written into a set of documents that the salesman must go through with the customer to ensure that all legal requirements have been met.

Which FOUR of the following statements are consistent with TGD's proposed shift to a set of formal procedure?

- A Slower training for new salesmen.
- B Sales staff have formal documents to refer to if they are in doubt as to the correct procedure.
- C Easier for Government auditors to check TGD's compliance with appropriate regulations.
- D Reduced risk of fines and legal action by the Government.
- E Cases where the correct procedures have not been followed are easier to identify.
- F It will improve the ease with which salesmen can deal with non-standard transactions.
- G It reduces TGD's overall cost of administration.
- H It allows all transactions to be recorded in different ways, increasing flexibility.

The Chairman of the Board has significant authority within the club as he has been appointed directly by the majority shareholder, who listens to his advice on a regular basis. The Chairman has no direct control over the pay and conditions of FFC employees, but the team typically follows his instructions due to his position.

FFC's coach is put in place to help the football team improve their skills. She is well respected in the football community and has significant experience of coaching football teams. The team follows her leadership as they believe she can significantly improve their chances of winning their matches.

The Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of FFC controls the pay and conditions of all the workers in FFC. He decides on bonuses and pay rises for the team and other workers.

He is aware that YGH has had a number of problems with its staff behaviour in previous years and he wishes to understand the problems so that he can try to avoid similar issues reoccurring.

As such, Jules has undertaken some analysis work based on role theory and has identified the following issues:

- A The waiters in the restaurant have different behaviour patterns to those of the kitchen staff, suggesting that both groups have their own defined norms of behaviour
- B Waiters have a specific uniform that they must wear at all times to enable customers to identify them
- C Waiters and bar staff often come into conflict as it is uncertain which group is responsible for taking drinks orders from customers
- D Kitchen staff have previously reacted badly to being marked down on their appraisals for not reducing waste as they have argued that they are not responsible for this – despite management thinking that they should be

PERSONAL EFFECTIVENESS AND COMMUNICATION IN BUSINESS

- 40 (a) GGK is a small company which has grown rapidly in recent years. David, the main office manager, wishes to improve the company's quality of appraisals as he feels that this will help the company to effectively monitor the performance of its staff.

David has recently read an article which stated that the performance appraisal process usually followed four main stages:

- A Action plan production
- B Production of an appraisal report
- C Identify the criteria for assessment
- D Interview

Place the stages into the correct order, beginning with the lowest level of motivation.
(0.5 marks each, total = 2 marks)

- (b) GGK has a relatively high staff turnover and is concerned that this is affecting their performance, as it is constantly having to train new employees. GGK has examined four instances of staff leaving the company in an attempt to classify the causes of each staff member leaving into one of the three following categories:

- A Avoidable
- B Discharge
- C Unavoidable

Identify which of the following situations relate to avoidable, discharge or unavoidable.

| | Avoidable | Discharge | Unavoidable |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------|------------------|--------------------|
| Employee A's department had been restructured, leading to her being made redundant. | | | |
| Employee B's contract was terminated after he was found to be stealing from the company. | | | |
| Employee C was highly skilled but unhappy with her pay – which she felt was below market average. GGK's managers were unwilling to negotiate more favourable terms, so she resigned. | | | |
| Employee D had moved to another town and was unable to commute to his existing job in GGK's factory. | | | |

- 41 (a) Emir has recently started work at a factory and has been told that he has access to a coach and a mentor.

Identify which of the roles below relate to a coach or a mentor.

| Role | Coach | Mentor |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------|---------------|
| Giving general guidance and help to Emir. | | |
| Improving Emir's skills on a particular machine. | | |
| Acting as an impartial sounding board for any problems Emir might have. | | |
| Has a defined time period in which it should be completed. | | |

- (b) Emir has recently come into conflict with a number of other people since he started at the factory. His manager is aware that there are four main ways of dealing with conflict.

The following sentences contain gaps relating to the type of conflict management technique used.

Emir was in conflict with an existing employee, Oscar. The manager decided that the conflict was not significant enough to get involved and took no action, adopting a _1_ approach.

- (i) Select the method of dealing with conflict that appropriately fills gap 1 above.

resolution/suppression/reduction/denial*

Emir was also in conflict with another new employee, Leon. This was found to be because Leon was being paid more than Emir in spite of having equivalent experience and qualifications. The manager adopted a _2_ strategy and increased Emir's pay accordingly.

- 42 (a) Thomas works in a local government office. He has significant problems with time management and often feels that there are 'simply not enough hours in the day' for him to accomplish all of the tasks he has been given.

Thomas has compiled a list of issues that he feels may be preventing him from achieving good time management in his role.

Which FOUR of the following statements are most likely to be contributing to Thomas's poor time management?

- A Thomas's job is dynamic and very unpredictable.
- B Thomas is assertive and willing to tell his managers if he does not have time to complete a task.
- C Many of the people that Thomas has to meet face-to-face are located far from his office.
- D When in his office, Thomas operates a 'closed door' policy meaning that colleagues have to formally book time to discuss issues with him.
- E The department that Thomas works for is bureaucratic, requiring significant amounts of paperwork to be undertaken for both major and minor tasks.
- F Thomas's department makes extensive use of IT to aid communication between employees.
- G Thomas dislikes keeping a diary and feels he never 'has any time' to complete one.
- H Thomas is skilled at breaking larger jobs down into smaller tasks.

- (b) PAR is a large company based in country H. It offers specialist legal advice to accident victims and this requires significant communication between PAR's staff and the accident victim to allow PAR to prepare a legal case.

Identify the communication feature which is associated with each of the following aspects of PAR's communication with victims.

| | Channel | Noise | Feedback | Decoder |

Section 3

ANSWERS TO OBJECTIVE TEST QUESTIONS

THE BUSINESS ORGANISATION

1 D

Organisations do not have to create a product or service in order to be classified as an organisation. For example, an orchestra may be classed as an organisation, but it does not necessarily create a product.

2 A

'Schools' is the correct answer because the other organisations are normally found in the private (i.e. non-governmental) sector.

3 C

C is the correct answer because this is the main activity in the public sector. Options A and B relate to the private sector and D to a mutual organisation.

4 C

This is the definition of the term 'synergy'. Note that organisations may also allow specialisation, meaning that individuals can focus on becoming highly skilled in just one area.

5 A

As public limited companies are able to sell their shares to the public, they will often find it easier to raise large amounts of capital for growth, if needed. This may be much harder for partnerships and sole traders. Only public companies can sell shares to the public, companies may be owned by only one shareholder and shareholders enjoy limited liability.

6 B

Partnerships and companies would both usually be profit seeking. While government departments are likely to be not-for-profit, they would be part of the public sector. Therefore only charities would be likely to be both private AND not-for-profit.

7 C

Co-operatives are organised solely to meet the needs of the member-owners. Non-governmental organisations (NGOs) do not have profit as a primary goal and are not linked to national governments. Charities may be examples of NGOs. Private limited companies have shareholders, not members.

8 B

Westeros is a profit-seeking organisation – given that its fifteen owners own ‘shares’, it must be a private limited company. As such, only B is likely to be appropriate from the options provided. Central government funding is usually for public sector organisations, donations would usually be the major source of funding for charities and Westeros cannot issue shares to the public as it is a private limited company.

9

| Statement | True | False |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|--------------|
| Not-for-profit organisations (NFPs) have varied objectives, which depend on the needs of their members or the sections of society they were created to benefit. | ✓ | |
| The primary objective of government-funded organisations is to reduce costs of their operations and thus minimise the burden on tax payers. | | ✓ |

NFPs may have radically different objectives – a charity may aim to help, say, animals under threat of extinction while a hospital may wish to treat its patients as effectively as possible.

Government funded organisations are usually concerned with providing basic government services. This does not always involve minimising the costs of their operations.

10 A

NGOs are any organisations that do not have profit as a primary goal and are not directly linked to the government. Most charities would fall into this category.

BUSINESS ORGANISATION AND STRUCTURE

11 B

Because the entrepreneurial structure is run by one person who makes all the decisions, this powerful individual will have strong control over the organisation and its strategic direction, leading to better goal congruence.

12 D

Function managers may make decisions to increase their own power, or in the interests of their own function, rather than in the interests of the company overall. Economies of scale, standardisation and specialists feeling comfortable are advantages of a functional structure.

13 C

The features given suggest that this is an example of a machine bureaucracy – large numbers of rules and procedures and significant standardisation.

14 A

If H wants to manage each product separately, it will need to adopt either a matrix or divisional approach, as these would allow the creation of separate divisions for each product. However, H wishes to keep its administrative costs as low as possible. As the matrix structure has high admin costs due to high numbers of managers, A should adopt a divisional approach.

15 A

The junior accountants actually undertake the main work of the firm, suggesting that they are part of P's operating core. Note that if P was in a different industry (such as construction) accountants would be likely classified as part of the technostructure, as in this type of organisation they would provide technical support and aid standardisation.

16 D

The granting of authority over each geographic area to geographic bosses results in a potential loss of control over key operating decisions. This weakness is also present in the Product/Division/Department structure.

17

| Statement | True | False |
|-------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|--------------|
| Tall organisations typically have narrow spans of control. | ✓ | |
| A 'flat' organisation is one that has a short scalar chain. | ✓ | |

18 D

Centralisation involves most decisions being made centrally within the organisation (i.e. at head office level). This means less training for more junior/local staff as well as better goal congruence as all decisions within the organisation are made by the same, senior group of managers. Options (ii) and (iii) are advantages of decentralisation.

19 A – VIRTUAL

Virtual organisations exist as a network of contracts with third party suppliers and will outsource all major functions. Hollow organisations only outsource non-core functions.

20 D

The description best matches a modular structure, where some parts of a product are manufactured by external companies rather than by the manufacturer itself.

21 B – FALSE

Offshoring typically involves the transfer of a function to an overseas location to reduce running costs. It would not normally involve transferring existing staff members to the other country.

22 B – FALSE

‘Shared services’ typically involves streamlining operations in order to reduce costs. It will also involve improving consistency over the way the service is undertaken and often leads to the service charging the other parts of the business to use its resources (i.e. it is run like a business).

23 B

Strategic planning involves making plans for the whole business, such as which locations to open, which markets to enter or exit and whether to raise cash from investors. As such, Stark’s decision would fall into this category.

24 A

Operational planning involves practical, day-to-day strategies. As such, junior management would be best placed to undertake this level of planning.

25 C

This would normally be the function of the marketing department.

26 A – TRUE

‘Place’ involves where the business sells its goods. For a high-street retailer this would be their stores. For an online retailer, it is more likely to be their website.

27 B

This is a philosophy of business that permeates all areas, focusing attention on the customer.
A = a sales orientation.

28 B

The basic mix tends to be used by organisations selling a tangible product (as opposed to a service).

29 D

While the 4Ps are product, place, promotion and price, don’t forget that there are other elements that have subsequently been added to the marketing mix. These are people, processes and physical evidence.

30

| Situation | Product | Place |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------|--------------|
| Arryn Co manufactures and sells board games. It is currently considering the packaging, quality and design of the board games as part of a strategic review. | ✓ | |
| A key decision when reviewing the marketing mix is whether to sell directly to the consumer or indirectly through an intermediary. | | ✓ |

This would be a classic example of price discrimination – selling the same product at different prices to different markets/sections of the market.

32 C

The first product is cheap to attract customers but the second is expensive.

33 D

Segmentation would occur at the strategic choice stage as this enables the organisation to target attractive sections of the market.

34 A

Promotion follows the mnemonic 'AIDA' – awareness, interest, desire, action.

ORGANISATIONAL CULTURE IN BUSINESS

35

| Statement | True | False |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|--------------|
| Culture was expressed by Handy as 'the sum of the belief, knowledge, attitudes, norms and customs that prevail in an organisation'. | | ✓ |
| The tales of company creation, such as difficulties the founder had to face and how he/she managed to overcome them successfully often form a part of organisational culture. | ✓ | |

Handy expressed culture as 'the way we do things around here', so statement 1 is false. However, history of the organisation plays an important role in shaping the mindset of the employees as it creates examples for them to follow in the future. This makes statement 2 correct.

36 A

Dress codes are usually seen as part of artefacts. This is because they are easy to observe. Note that 'person' is not a level of culture in Schein's model.

37 B – SCHEIN

This was a key finding of Schein's analysis.

38 B

Schein described these aspects of culture as basic assumptions and values. The other two levels are espoused values (strategies and goals, including slogans) and artefacts, which are the aspects of culture that are easy to see.

39 D

The four cultural types are: person, role, task and power.

40 A – TRUE

It can either lead to improved motivation or increased inefficiency depending on its nature. This is one of the reasons managers need to be aware of the informal organisation that exists within their business.

41 B

Person culture focuses on the need of the few selected individuals who occupy the prominent place. A is compatible with the task culture, whereas C and D are common in role culture.

42 C

Power cultures occur when there is one major source of power – often found in small owner managed businesses where the owner has total control over the business.

43 A

By definition. Masculinity represents stereotypical male values of competitiveness, ambition and accumulation of wealth. Femininity represents traditional female values of caring and nurturing.

44 B

Bureaucratic businesses are evidence of high uncertainty avoidance as they give staff defined rules to work with. The fact that junior staff have a say in the running of the business is evidence of low power distance.

45

'The informal organisation is the network of relationships that exist within an organisation and arises through common interests and friendships between members of staff.'

The informal organisation evolves over time and is a network of relationships within an organisation that arise due to common interests or friendships. The informal organisation can either enhance or hold back the business since it often embraces both advantages (e.g. higher levels of motivation) and disadvantages (e.g. opposition to change).

46 C

If managers work along with the informal groups within the organisation, it should improve motivation and productivity of workers. The informal organisation often encourages individuals to conform to the organisation's norms (which can cause increased resistance to change), but does tend to allow strong interdivisional communication.

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY AND INFORMATION SYSTEMS IN BUSINESS

| Statement | True | False |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|--------------|
| Big data contains both financial and non-financial data. | ✓ | |
| Cloud computing allows storage and accessing of data programs over the internet instead of on the computer's hard drive. | ✓ | |

Both statements are correct. Big data refers to large volume of data, many sources of data and many types of data. Cloud computing is the practice of using a network of remote servers hosted on the Internet to store, manage, and process data, rather than a local server or a personal computer.

48 A – TRUE

Spreadsheets tend to be used to analyse data, such as lists of numbers rather than for long-term storage (which would be a function of a database application).

49 D

The information has not been put in a user-friendly manner and cannot be easily understood by the users.

50 A

If there is a programme bug or a virus that affected the database, it may mean that the whole storage is affected and the entire set of data will be lost.

51 B

Only B is correct – the others are advantages of a manual accounting system.

52

| Statement | True | False |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|--------------|
| Blockchain technology presents the possibility of an accounting ledger that can be continuously updated and verified without the threat of being altered or corrupted. | ✓ | |
| Phishing is a type of computer virus. | | ✓ |

Only the first statement is correct. Phishing an attempt by criminals to try to obtain sensitive information by presenting themselves as a trusty source.

53

| | Decision support system | Expert system | Management information system |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------|----------------------|--------------------------------------|
| This system type converts data from a transaction processing system into information for monitoring performance and maintaining co-ordination. | | | ✓ |
| When the government authority at the end of the tax year sends thousands of notifications to people with an estimate of the tax they need to pay, these letters are likely to be produced by this system type. | | ✓ | |

54 D

The link between the inventory store and the component suppliers expands FFK's network and so exposes them to a cyber-security threat. Phone orders are a potential business risk but not a cyber-security threat.

55 C

The security of data is a major concern in the majority of organisations and if the organisation lacks the resources to manage data then there is likely to be a greater risk of leaks and losses.

56 B AND D

Artificial intelligence is the theory and development of computer systems able to perform tasks normally requiring human intelligence, such as voice recognition, driverless cars, visual perception, decision-making, translation between languages etc.

STAKEHOLDERS

57 A

Internal includes employees and managers/directors; connected includes shareholders, customers, suppliers, and finance providers. The third stakeholder group is external which includes the community at large, government and trade unions.

58 C

Pressure groups are external to the organisation, but can sometimes influence a company's decisions. They have no contractual link to the organisation, however, meaning that they are also secondary.

59 C

In this case, A's shareholders have a high level of power, but a low level of interest.

60 B – FALSE

This approach is referred to as Keep Informed, whereas minimal effort implies that stakeholders will accept what they are told.

61 A – TRUE

This is correct as customers have an interest in higher levels of product and service quality and, in the short term at least, satisfying this interest is likely to reduce the profits and dividends available to shareholders.

62 A

If stakeholders have little interest in the business and no real power, there is no point to a business doing more than minimal effort.

EXTERNAL ANALYSIS – POLITICAL AND LEGAL FACTORS63 C

A = Technological heading, B = Economic heading, D = Social heading.

64 B – FALSE

Constructive dismissal is when an employee resigns because their employer has breached the terms of their contract. The definition given in the question is that of redundancy.

65 A

The other reason for unfair dismissal is due to legal reasons (i.e. a criminal record may prevent someone from holding a particular job).

66 A

Privatisation refers to a government selling its assets.

67 A

Other sources include the International Court of Justice, European parliament, European courts and certain international agreements, e.g. World Trade Organisation rules.

68 C

The Act imposes obligations on the Data Controller (an individual or an organisation who has information about the individual), and the rights of the Data Subject (individual about whom the information is held).

69

| | Yes | No |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|-----------|
| Right of subject access – individuals are entitled to be told whether the data controller holds personal data about them. | ✓ | |
| Right to prevent processing for the purposes of direct marketing. | ✓ | |

70 D

The credit file company must provide A with access to his credit file. However, A does not have the right to request this for free and may have to pay a fee.

A can also use typical data protection legislation to block direct marketing. However, junk mail is likely to be sent to a large number of recipients and therefore is not direct marketing.

71 B

The employee is responsible for his or her own health and safety. The employer has a duty to provide a safe working environment, etc.

72 D

Goods would not typically have to be reasonably priced.

73 D

Simple contracts can be verbal, or even implied by the actions of one of the parties. In addition, consumer legislation often also covers the provision of services.

74 A – TRUE

This is known as ‘intention to create legal relations’.

EXTERNAL ANALYSIS – ECONOMIC FACTORS

75 B

Equilibrium is the selling price at which supply exactly equals demand. The number of units demanded by the market will usually fall as the price rises (as per the demand curve) – this is nothing to do with the equilibrium point itself.

76 A

$XED = \% \text{ change in demand for one product} / \% \text{ change in price of the other product} = 4/5 = 0.8$.

Given the products are substitutes, the XED must be positive.

77 A – TRUE

By definition. A price change will cause movement up or down the demand curve. A change in the conditions of demand (i.e. tastes or population) will shift the entire curve either left or right.

78 C

The fact that the units sold fall by more than the price increase indicates that this product is relatively elastic. This would give a PED of more than 1.

79 A

Expansion and contraction in demand will occur when the price charged by H for the GHF300 changes. A reduction in the selling price is likely to mean that more people want to buy the vehicle and demand will expand.

The other three options will all create a shift in the demand curve, where more units of the product will be sold, even if the company maintains its current prices.

80 B

The opposite is true – perfect markets assume that all goods sold by suppliers are homogenous (identical).

81 A – OLIGOPOLY

A market with only a few dominant organisations is referred to as an oligopoly.

82 C

This type of market occurs when a business has many different competitors, but each offers a somewhat differentiated product.

83 D

The other factors are the availability of substitutes and the definition of the market.

84 A AND D

Upwards shifts in the supply curve are caused by increases in the costs of making and/or selling the product. This means that, even if the selling price stays constant, the profitability of the product will fall, meaning that suppliers like L will not wish to produce as many units of the product as they are less profitable.

Options A and D both involve the costs of production rising. These would therefore cause an upward shift in the curve. Options B and C are the opposite, leading to a decline in the costs of production of the windows and therefore a downward shift in the curve.

Low price elasticity of demand indicates that even a significant change in the selling price will have little effect on the number of units that customers demand. If the customers spend a high proportion of their income on E's product, any rise in the selling price could make it unaffordable, leading to a significant fall in demand. This would therefore indicate HIGH elasticity of demand. If the product is not seen as a necessity, it would again mean that if the price rises, customers may no longer feel that they have to keep buying the product, again leading to a significant decline in demand. A high number of substitutes would enable customers to easily switch to cheaper rival products if E raises its prices. If, however, customers buy the product habitually (or automatically) without ever really checking the price (as often happens with gum, or newspapers), a significant rise in prices will have little impact on sales volume.

86 A

The government is setting a minimum price for labour. This will increase the supply of labour, as work becomes more attractive to the population of country X – but will reduce the demand for labour from companies as it becomes more expensive. This is likely to lead to a surplus of labour, leading to rising unemployment. The rising cost of wages is likely to lead manufacturing companies to avoid making items that are labour intensive and move towards automation where possible.

87 D

As production increases, the cost per unit will initially fall due to the larger number of units being made which the total cost is spread over. However, even within the short-term, as the number of units of output grows, efficiency of the production system will fall, leading to a rise in average cost per unit again. This is known as the law of diminishing returns. Diseconomies of scale occur over the long-term.

88 B

This is sometimes referred to as demand-deficient, persistent or Keynesian unemployment. Keynesian economists refer to this as a deflationary gap and would seek to remove it by boosting demand. Monetarists would seek to reduce cyclical unemployment by appropriate supply side measures as they would argue that cyclical unemployment does not really exist.

89 A – TRUE

Rapid growth tends to lead to rising incomes, which often increases demand by the population for imported goods.

90 B

Given the high rate of unemployment, the government of country Y is likely to be suffering from a fall in its tax receipts (unemployed individuals have lower earnings to tax). The government will also have to pay more in social security to support the increasing number of workers who are without jobs. The other three statements are correct.

91

| Economic growth | ✓ | |
| Money supply management | | ✓ |

Macroeconomic policy objectives tend to be management of economic growth, inflation, employment and a sustainable balance of payments. While the money supply may be used by the government to achieve its policies, it is not an objective in itself.

92 D

Expectations are often self-fulfilling as people adjust their behaviour based on the predictions made, such as the belief that house prices will continue to grow will cause people to buy a house to make a quick gain, which in its turn inflates the prices of houses.

93 B

A deflationary gap occurs when there is insufficient demand in the economy. Having a budget deficit means that the government is putting money in the economy, for example by employing more people, who will use their earning to buy goods produced in the country, thus giving jobs to even more people. C and D are a part of the monetary policy.

94 D

A recession starts when demand begins to fall and leads to reduced purchases of raw materials and increased unemployment; this in turn leads to reduced household incomes and a further fall in demand, which can result in a slump.

95 A

In extreme cases of inflation the function of money may break down, leading to civil unrest and even war.

96 B

The country is exporting too much, which means that factors of production could be fully utilised, therefore the costs of an additional unit of output will be higher than the costs of previous units, thus prices will be raised causing inflation.

97 D

'Demerit' goods are such things as illegal drugs. A, B and C are examples of the positive aspects of growth. A = real growth. B = the benefits of growth are being evenly distributed. C = the population, on average, is better off.

98 A

Keynes argued that it was the government's role to move the economy to a better equilibrium, i.e. one closer to full employment. This involved the government borrowing money and injecting it into the economy to stimulate economic growth – or slowing down the economy by increasing levels of taxation.

99 B

The classical approach is to do nothing and let the economy find its own equilibrium. The Keynesian approach (demand side) would involve running a budget surplus/deficit to manipulate the economy and help it reach its equilibrium point. This appears to be what the government in country K is currently using. The minister is suggesting the removal of key market imperfections, such as union activity and monopolies. This is a classic supply-side or monetarist approach.

100 A

Aggregate demand is calculated as consumer spending + investment by firms + government spending + exports – imports. If all else stays constant, a rising trade deficit means that imports are rising faster than exports, lowering the aggregate demand.

If the imports are also increasing in price, this will cause inflation within country C – specifically imported inflation. Monetary inflation occurs when the money supply expands too rapidly.

101 C

Expenditure reducing strategies involve the government shrinking the domestic economy to reduce the demand for imports. A budget surplus would accomplish this.

Expenditure-switching strategies encourage consumers to switch to domestically produced goods. The other three options are examples of these.

102 A – KEYNESIAN

Remember that Keynes' approach is also referred to as 'demand-side' economics as it involves the Government stepping in to manipulate the level of demand in the economy as needed.

EXTERNAL ANALYSIS – SOCIAL, ENVIRONMENTAL AND TECHNOLOGICAL FACTORS

103 D

Population growth can be important to a range of organisations in the private sector – high growth, for instance, may indicate growth in the market for the organisation's products or services.

The definition given for 'attitudes' is actually the definition of 'tastes'. Attitudes represent a person or group's like or dislike for a thing.

104 B

An aging population will not automatically mean that high-tech products will fall in popularity – though the businesses that manufacture and sell them may need to adjust their products and marketing to target older users. The second statement is correct.

105 C

Outsourcing means that some of the processes previously undertaken by the company itself are now being transferred to an external supplier.

106 D

Carbon footprint refers to the volume of carbon emissions produced by the company. The goal of social responsibility is to be conscious of the impact operations have on the environment and the planet. It is possible for the firm's products to be boycotted if customers believe that it acts in a socially irresponsible way.

107 C

Delaying refers to the reduction in the number of levels of management, making organisational structure flatter. Managers can use technology to help keep in touch with staff, thus freeing more time for more urgent tasks. Option D is not directly relevant to organisational structure.

108 A

Merely rebranding a product is unlikely to reduce a company's impact on its environment. The other three, however, should all help.

109 B

This is the official definition of sustainability.

110 C

Outsourcing is likely to increase the risk of security breaches as a third party will have access to Lannister's systems. Outsourcing IT would be likely to mean the closure of Lannister's own IT department, which will mean the loss of skilled staff. This will make it difficult for Lannister to bring IT back in-house in the future. In addition, such a move would be likely to cause a loss of competitive advantage as Lannister will have no way to create its own, unique systems.

111 A – TRUE

By not creating waste, an organisation is ensuring that resources are more likely to be available to future generations, improving sustainability.

COMPETITIVE FACTORS

112 C

Threat of substitutes refers to people's tendency to replace one product with another.

113 D

The assessment will be in three steps, analysing how the firm can achieve a competitive advantage, the main competitive forces in the industry and how parts of the firm contribute to its competitiveness.

114 B

High fixed costs often mean that a business needs to ensure it sells a reasonable volume of its products in order to cover these fixed costs and become profitable. This need to maintain sales volume is likely to give customers higher power (the company will be keen to retain customers) and will increase competitive rivalry (the company will want to avoid loss of customers to rivals/will need to attract customers from rivals to maintain its volume). High fixed costs may also create a barrier to prevent new businesses from entering the market.

115 D

Outbound logistics includes packaging and delivery.

116 B

The receipt of the cable from the manufacturers would be inbound logistics. Cutting it down into lengths forms the operations of AAH. Procurement would be sourcing suppliers for the cable, while infrastructure would include the structure of the organisation (i.e. centralised purchasing of cable).

117 B – FALSE

Differentiation involves making your product stand out from rivals with additional features or a stronger brand. This would usually allow you to charge a premium for your product.

118 A – FOCUS

H is targeting a niche part of the market and providing goods and services to match its needs.

119 B

The approach involves breaking the firm down into five 'primary' and four 'support' activities and then looking at each to see if they give a cost advantage or quality advantage.

120 B

The term 'administration' indicates that Steve's role is a support activity, as this term is used in the model. The description of his role could only reinforce this conclusion. Likewise, 'information technology' indicates that Sam performs a support role. Finally, although Porter's term 'procurement' is not included in the statement, Sunny's responsibilities for dealing with suppliers of inventory and capital equipment are sufficient to conclude that Sunny also occupies a support role.

Note: Instead of applying this process of elimination, candidates could have considered the essential differences between primary and support activities, which would have led them to the correct conclusion.

121 A

It is likely to be a strength. It's clearly not a weakness or threat and given that is an internal issue, it should not be classed as an opportunity – although it may enable AZ to pursue any opportunities it identifies.

122 A – TRUE

By definition.

PROFESSIONAL ETHICS IN ACCOUNTING AND BUSINESS

123 D

Amelia is arguing that she needed to use the money for an ethical reason, so the theft was justifiable. This would be an example of a relativist approach, where actions are justified based on their circumstances. The action is not being argued to be for the 'greater good' or for all stakeholders (presumably the theft will not be good for the shareholders of LGH!) so Amelia is not a utilitarian or a pluralist.

124 A – TRUE

By definition. Professions also require the mastering of specialist skills, governance by a professional organisation and a process of certification of new members.

125 B

The remaining two ethical principles are integrity and objectivity.

126

| Statement | True | False |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|--------------|
| All ACCA members must comply with the Fundamental Principles, whether or not they are in practice. | ✓ | |
| Professionals owe an obligation to society as well as a duty to their client. | ✓ | |

Those failing to observe the standards expected of them may be called before the ACCA's Disciplinary Committee and required to explain their conduct.

The IFAC code (which is the basis of the ACCA code) states in its introduction that 'a professional accountant's responsibility is not exclusively to satisfy the needs of an individual client or employer.'

The professional accountant, therefore, has a duty to act in the public interest as well as in the interests of his employer and the shareholders.

127 B – FALSE

The definition given is that of integrity.

128 A

Egoists will choose the option that most benefits themselves, which would appear to be accepting the bribe. Utilitarians would accept the bribe if it caused a favourable outcome for the greatest number of people – not necessarily all stakeholders (this is pluralism).

129 D

Professions must have: a process of certification, a period of training leading to the mastering of specialised skills, an ethical code and governance by a professional organisation. Occupations do not need any of these. Both organisations and professions would be expected to comply with legislation.

130 C

An accountant should first raise the issue with whoever is in charge of ethics or governance within the organisation (i.e. the Compliance Officer). If this does not solve the issue, the accountant can take legal/professional advice from their professional body. Finally, if the issue is still unresolved, the matter may be reported to the relevant authorities.

131 B

Noor recommended the purchase of the business and is now having to review the quality of that decision. This makes it difficult for her to be objective and criticise the prospects of the business.

132 B

They are all ACCA safeguards, except for B, which is a safeguard that an individual company may put in place in order to minimise the risk of unethical behaviour.

133 B

Lorenzo is a utilitarian – looking to benefit the greatest number of people. Note that ‘individualist’ is not an approach to ethical decision-making.

134 A

The acronym ‘HOTTER’ can be used to remember these – honesty, openness, transparency, trust, empowerment and respect.

135 C

This is the definition of respect. Empowerment is getting employees involved in making their own decisions.

136 A – TRUE

Deontological ethics is linked to the concept of absolutism – things are inherently wrong or right, regardless of the consequences.

GOVERNANCE AND SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY IN BUSINESS

137 D

Reasons for the separation of ownership and control include the suggestion that specialist management can run the business better than those who own the business.

138 D

Directors, who are placed in control of resources that they do not own and are effectively agents of the shareholders, should be working in the best interests of the shareholders. However, they may be tempted to act in their own interests, for example by voting themselves huge salaries. The background to the agency problem is the separation of ownership and control – in many large companies the people who own the company (the shareholders) are not the same people as those who control the company (the board of directors).

139 B

As this will serve as a financial motivator and will align directors' interests with those of the shareholders.

140 B

The stakeholders are all those influenced by, or those who can influence the company's decisions and actions.

141 B

Sustainable development focuses on the future, making sure that our actions today do not jeopardise the future of the planet.

142 A

Many customers are choosing to buy Fairtrade products and shareholders are investing in environmentally-friendly companies as people are becoming more aware of the impact their actions have on the environment and society as a whole.

143 B – FALSE

Shareholders can become directors. The agency problem refers to the problem of directors acting in their own personal best interests rather than those of the company and its owners.

144 D

Owning the shares creates a direct link between a company's performance and the NED's wealth, thus rendering him/her non-independent. Note that NEDs should not have worked for the company as an employee for the last five years or serve as a NED for more than 9 years with the same company. It is worth noting that non-independent NEDs can be chosen by the company – as long as there is a majority of independent NEDs on the board and appropriate disclosures are made.

145 A

An audit committee should, amongst other things, review accounting policies and financial statements as a whole to ensure that they are appropriate and balanced.

146 B

Companies are required by law to send a copy (or a summarised version) to each shareholder. Most companies will post a copy on their web site or will provide a paper-based copy free of charge to any member of the public who requests one.

147 C

Distractors A and B should have been eliminated by the references to 'legally binding', 'must adhere' and 'detailed rules'. Distractor D suggests that corporate governance relates to management and administration at the operational level, where in fact corporate governance is about ensuring standards are set at the highest levels of an organisation through appropriate mechanisms, which can filter down to operations.

Codes of practice are usually associated with a principles-based approach rather than a rules-based approach, so successful candidates were directed to the correct response by the words 'guidance' and 'should adopt'.

148 A

Ad-hoc stands for 'for the purpose' and the committee is likely to be disbanded as soon as the issue for which it was created is resolved.

149 D

Part of the Chairman's role is to maintain order, whereas A, B and C are a part of the role of Secretary.

150 B

Other duties of the committee secretary include preparing the location; assisting the chair; acting on and communicating decisions.

151 D

The remuneration committee is usually focused on Director's remuneration package. It does not examine the pay and grading for all employees.

152 B – FALSE

Committees tend to be slower at decision making than individuals as there is more conflict/disagreement between individual members.

153 A – TRUE

Decisions are often compromises, meaning that decisive action may not be taken.

LAW AND REGULATION GOVERNING ACCOUNTING

154 D

Companies house deals with incorporation and dissolution on companies, as it examines and stores companies' information as per Companies Act requirements.

155 B

National legislation places a requirement on companies in respect of mandatory reports to government and shareholders (and usually both). This is to ensure that limited companies adhere to certain minimum standards. In many countries an underlying purpose of this is to protect prospective and existing investors in the company, and to minimise the possibility of tax evasion.

Codes of corporate governance are now used extensively in countries that adopt a principles-based approach to corporate governance. Such codes are not underpinned by legislation and are voluntary in nature. Companies and other organisations are expected to comply with the provisions of the codes, or to explain to shareholders why they are not doing so.

International Accounting Standards seek to achieve consistency in reporting across international frontiers. They affect the content and presentation of the company accounts, but it is up to governments and their agents to decide on the requirements for preparation and filing of accounts.

Company financial statements must be free from material misstatement. They may still contain immaterial or insignificant mistakes or errors and be considered true and fair.

157

| | Yes | No |
|---------------------------------------------------|------------|-----------|
| Suspension of FVF's shares by the stock exchange. | ✓ | |
| Tax authority investigation into FVF. | ✓ | |

158 C

The IASB's aims are to develop a single set of high quality, understandable and enforceable global accounting standards and to co-operate with national accounting standard-setters to achieve convergence in accounting standards around the world.

159 B

Options A and D are the responsibility of the IFRS Advisory Council (AC), while option C is the role of the IASB.

160 B

FRSs in the UK are written by the ASB (Accounting Standards Board). They largely replaced SSAPs, although any SSAPs which have not yet been replaced by an FRS will still be in force.

ACCOUNTING AND FINANCE FUNCTIONS WITHIN BUSINESS

161 C

The treasurer would also be responsible for debt strategy, currency management, banking forecasting and risk management.

162 A – TRUE

Management accounting would focus on internal stakeholders.

163 A – TRUE

While it is recommended, it is ultimately up to the organisation itself.

164 A

Small companies do not have to be audited. As the company is owner-managed the agency problem will not be relevant.

165 C

The books of prime entry include sales, payables ledger, cash and petty cash books and appropriate journals.

166 B

Financial accountants would usually prepare the external financial statements, including the statement of cash flows, the income statement and the statement of financial position. A and C would normally be the responsibility of management accountants, while D would usually be undertaken by the treasury function.

167

Angelo decided to record the purchases made on the 2nd of April 200X in tax year ending 31st of March 200X. The authorities will likely classify this as tax evasion.

This is tax evasion as the company is illegally reducing its tax liability. Note that it cannot be both evasion AND avoidance simultaneously.

168 D

Tax avoidance is used to describe schemes which, whilst they are legal, are designed to defeat the intentions of the law makers. Thus, once a tax avoidance scheme becomes public knowledge, the law makers will usually step in to change the law to stop the scheme from working.

169 C

A, B and D are not true. They describe advantages of using the issue of share capital to finance investment.

170 B

A is incorrect as VDF will never have to pay dividends if it cannot afford them. Equity finance is not secured on the company's assets, so C is incorrect. D is also incorrect as dividends are not tax allowable, meaning that the issue of shares is unlikely to directly affect VDF's tax liability.

171 A

Working capital is the capital available for conducting the day-to-day operations of an organisation.

172 B

Budgets lay out the planned income and expenditure for the coming period. Variance reports compare actual results to the budget for a period. The statement of financial position is the responsibility of financial accountants.

173 C

Integrated reports will provide users with additional information on anything the organisation feels they would be interested in, such as the company's environmental impact or sustainability in the period.

174 D

Costing of units would be the purpose of a cost schedule or standard cost card.

175 B

The six capitals are financial, manufactured, intellectual, human, social and relationship, and natural capital.

176

| | SOPL | SOPF |
|---------------------------------|-------------|-------------|
| The net assets of HGF | | ✓ |
| HGF's gross profit for the year | ✓ | |

Remember that the SOPF shows the assets, liabilities and capital of the company, while the SOPL shows the income and expenses (and therefore the profit or loss) of the business in the period.

FINANCIAL SYSTEMS AND PROCEDURES

177 A

Reconciliation of the purchase ledger would identify any discrepancies between the amounts that Victoria's business believes it owes suppliers and the amount its suppliers believe it owes them. This should identify any incorrect payments that have been made. Matching the payment amount to the original invoice and ensuring that the payment is correctly authorised could also help.

178 A

By matching the GDN to the original order, JBB will be ensuring that it is sending the correct items to each customer.

179 C

The fourth purpose is prevention of fraud. Control systems may indirectly improve profitability through increased efficiency, etc, but it is not one of their primary purposes.

180 D

Customer identity and ability to pay should be verified prior to a sale being processed. A, B, and C are good control measures, but are not directly relevant to prompt payment.

181 B

BACS is an automated bank transfer when the money is sent directly to an employee's bank account, which makes the transaction easy to trace and more secure.

182 C

A cheque requisition should be prepared for each payment. The cheque, the cheque requisition and the invoices to be paid should be submitted to a senior manager for approval and to have the cheque signed. Two signatories are often required for cheques above a certain amount. All cheques should be approved, not just large ones.

183 A

The usual procedure is for the individual responsible for the petty cash to present the receipts and vouchers in order to obtain replenishment.

However, two people should open the post and list the contents.

184 D

The purposes of organisational control are to safeguard company assets, ensure efficiency and prevent fraud and errors.

185 C

Errors in manual systems can be corrected via use of whitening fluid, etc.

In fact, automated systems have fewer errors, more security (passwords) and are easier to audit than manual systems.

186 B

As long as the system has been programmed accurately, XCX should see its calculations improve in accuracy due to automation. However, staff will need retraining on the new systems and there is the risk of a computer system crashing and losing all data (disaster recovery will need to be implemented to reduce this risk). However, the automated system is likely to ensure that only authorised employees have access to XCX's sensitive information.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF ACCOUNTING WITH OTHER BUSINESS FUNCTIONS

187 D

The accounting department can help ensure a profitable selling price is used for E's products.

1885 A

Option A would most likely be a marketing or service provision crossover with the accounting department.

189 C

The four features are: intangibility, inseparability, Perishability and variability.

190 D

Inseparability looks at the fact that services cannot easily be distinguished from the person providing the service. If the taxi driver behaves badly, the customer will perceive the service itself as being poor.

AUDIT AND FINANCIAL CONTROL

191 B

The internal audit also makes recommendations for the achievement of company objectives.
C is the role of the external auditors.

192 A

Statement 2 is part of the definition of internal control – while there is crossover between the two topics, make sure you know the differences between them!

193 B

They are employed by the management of the company and yet are expected to give an objective opinion on matters for which management are responsible.

194 D

The audit committee would act as an interface between the directors and internal auditors to reduce the problem of independence.

195 A AND D

Statement B is the wrong way round – external auditors test the underlying transactions that make up the financial statements, while internal auditors test the operations of the company's systems. Statement C is also incorrect as internal audit is not usually a legal requirement, though corporate governance principles state that if an internal audit function is not present, the company should annually assess the need for one.

196 A

Guidance for an internal audit is limited to fundamental principles and a small quantity of standards and these factors are largely responsible for the greater flexibility in how the work is done. However, there is no legal requirement for an internal auditor to possess an accounting qualification, though it is highly desirable.

197 A

Control environment refers to the overall attitude of managers to the importance of internal controls.

198 D

A TPS records and summarises the basic transactions of the organisation. This would be summarised and form part of the financial statements of the organisation. As such, it would form part of the retail company's information systems.

199 B

Segregation of roles may happen to identify frauds that have occurred in some circumstances, but its primary role is to prevent fraud as it would require collusion between multiple members of staff. Statement two is correct – general controls are designed to ensure that IT systems are operating correctly.

200 B

There should be a division of responsibilities for authorising or initiating a transaction, the physical custody and control of assets involved, and recording the transaction.

201 B

Reconciliations check for errors or frauds that have already occurred – they are therefore (mainly) detective in nature. If management takes subsequent action to deal with problems identified by the reconciliation, these would be corrective.

202 C

Validity involves checking that the information is valid (i.e. that it is possible data). For example, it could check the birth date given for the customer and ensure it is a valid age. This is not demonstrated by the computer system in the scenario.

203 A AND B

Options C is an application control, which focus on whether information inputted into the system is correct or not. Options A and B are general controls which check that the IT system is operating correctly and meeting their objectives.

204 A

The presence of a supervisor may deter people from committing fraud, such as taking money out of the till. B and C are examples of detective controls whereas D is an example of a corrective control.

205 B

Remember that it is the management's responsibility to ensure that the organisation has proper accounting records and true and fair financial statements. This would usually involve the company having internal controls.

206 A

Statement (ii) is incorrect as this issue of independence would normally be an issue for internal auditors – not external auditors. Statement (iv) is also incorrect as, if the internal controls are reliable, it will reduce the amount of substantive testing that the external auditor is required to perform.

207 D

Physical controls also include access controls, key-locked cabinets, CCTV and so on.

208 B – APPLICATION CONTROLS

By definition.

209 B – FALSE

If an organisation's internal controls are strong, it will reduce the amount of substantive testing that the external auditor will need to undertake.

FRAUD, FRAUDULENT BEHAVIOUR AND THEIR PREVENTION IN BUSINESS

| | Yes | No |
|-------------|------------|-----------|
| Motivation | ✓ | |
| Opportunity | ✓ | |

The other prerequisite is dishonesty. An honest employee is unlikely to commit fraud even if given the opportunity and motive.

211 B

The fraudster hopes that no one will notice or bother to investigate the small differences individually, although in aggregate they can total a worthwhile sum.

212 D

This fraud is covered up by mis-posting future receipts to the accounts which earlier had not been credited.

This fraud is often uncovered when the perpetrator takes a holiday and is unable to make the necessary mis-postings to cover his tracks.

213 B

These transactions are often reversed out after the year-end.

Typically, sales made just before the year-end are the subject of inflated invoices which are corrected by the issue of credit notes in the New Year.

214 D

An example is a two-year lease of a building. Under current accounting practices you do not have to show the asset or the related obligation to pay the rental amounts on the balance sheet. However, you have the use of the asset and a contractual obligation to pay the rentals.

215 D

In practice many organisations find that fraud is impossible eradicate. With regards to error, as it is unintentional, it will be hard to prevent such mistakes from taking place.

In addition, there is an implied duty within an employment contract so as to encourage staff to be honest and report any actual or suspected fraud.

216 C

The auditors' primary concern is to establish whether the accounts give a true and fair view. Only if the incident of fraud was material in value, and it is not properly reflected in the financial statement, would the auditors need to qualify the financial statement.

217 C

People living beyond their means are often driven to make up the shortfall of money necessary to support such a luxury lifestyle by committing fraud.

218 C

The Nominated Officer is responsible for investigating any large or unusual transactions. They would only be reported to the appropriate authorities if there were sufficient grounds for suspicion.

219 B – FALSE

Money laundering legislation can be applied to any assets obtained by criminal means.

220 B – FALSE

The offences recognised are laundering, failure to report and tipping off. Placement, layering and integration are the stages of money laundering itself.

221 D

Effective teeming and lading requires access to both parts of a control cycle such as sales and receipts or purchases and payments.

222 D

This is a classic example of a Ponzi scheme (or a pyramid scheme).

223 C

Management authorisation will increase the chances of fraudulent and inaccurate payments being made to non-existent payables.

LEADERSHIP, MANAGEMENT AND SUPERVISION

224 C

Contingency theory sees effective leadership as being dependent on a number of variable or contingent factors – in Adair's case these variables are task needs, individual needs and group needs. Adair's model looks at leadership in relation to the needs of the task, individual and group.

225 D

Harry's position is clearly unfavourable, with little power and a poor relationship with his staff. Psychologically distant leaders favour formal roles and relationships, judge subordinates on the basis of performance and are primarily task oriented. This would best fit Harry.

In contrast psychologically close leaders do not seek to formalise roles and relationships and are more concerned with maintaining good relationships at work. Their style works best when the situation is moderately favourable.

226 C

Helena is only outlining the positives of the new system and is distorting the information to stress that the new system will be useful. This is an example of manipulation and co-optation.

227 C

By definition.

228 B – FALSE

Managers cannot delegate responsibility to more junior members of staff.

229 A – TRUE

By definition.

230 C

This definition best captures the key elements of a supervisor's responsibilities, which are primarily concerned with planning and controlling the work of their group.

231 D

The focus of Taylor's model is that staff members should be scientifically chosen to ensure they are suitable for the job they are being hired to do. Once hired, management are responsible for all key decisions and providing instructions to workers. While co-operation between workers and managers should be close, scientific management does not suggest employee suggestion schemes.

232 A

The human relations approach suggests that relationship and interactions are more important to creating a productive workforce than money or imposed standards.

233 D

Contingency theorists do not ignore the lessons learnt from earlier theorists – they adapt them.

234 C

In Mintzberg's view, these are the ten skills managers need to develop greater effectiveness. The ten skills are as follows: Interpersonal – Figurehead, Leader, Liaison. Informational – Monitor, Disseminator, Spokesperson. Decisional – Entrepreneur, Disturbance handler, Resource allocator, Negotiator.

235 A

By definition. Note that (4) is incorrect as responsibility cannot be delegated.

236 D

Co-ordinating looks at ensuring that all staff work together (i.e. increasing goal congruence).

237 A AND C

Staff bonuses mean that the manager is offering her staff a reward for adopting the system. She is also relying on referent power by using her charisma/relationship with her employees.

238 B

The grid measures concern for production on the horizontal axis and concern for people on the vertical axis. A 1.9 manager has the lowest production score on the horizontal axis (little work is achieved), but the highest people score on the vertical axis (the manager is attentive to the needs of people).

239 C

Tells = Autocratic; Sells = Persuasive; Consults = Participative; Joins = Democratic.

240 A

Statement 2 is the definition of 'style' theories.

RECRUITMENT AND SELECTION OF EMPLOYEES

241 A

It is unlikely that poor recruitment and selection will increase the employee motivation. Hiring the wrong person for the job usually has a detrimental impact on their motivation as well as (potentially) the motivation of those around them. However, the remaining options are all possible consequences.

242 D

Individuals with specific skills are likely to be in receipt of trade, technical or professional journals (e.g. Accountancy Age) and accustomed to using those journals to find a job.

A disadvantage of such journals is that they can have long closing dates and may contain many similar advertisements.

243 B

The personal specification is focused on the attributes a candidate needs to possess in order to fulfil the job requirements. The job description is focused on duties and responsibilities of the post, whereas job evaluation considers the worth of the job to the company and therefore how much the jobholder is to be paid.

244 B

Recruitment consultants are usually involved in the early stages of the recruitment and selection process, e.g. advising on job descriptions, designing job advertisements, screening applications and assisting with short-listing of candidates for interview. They frequently conduct the first round of interviews.

Consultants are not normally involved in deciding which of the short-listed candidates should get the job.

Statement two, however, is correct. The two other key elements of an interview are to find the best person for the job and to ensure that the candidate understands what the job is and what the career prospects are. The interviewing process also impacts on the company's image.

245 D

You can remember Rodger's seven-point plan using the acronym SCIPDAG – special aptitudes, circumstances, interests, physical makeup, disposition and attainments.

246 D

External recruitment will involve advertising and other recruitment costs, as well as (in many cases) higher wages being offered.

247 C

Both statements are correct.

248 D

Diversity is perceived to enrich an organisation's human capital.

249 B

Some organisations set themselves goals on the representation of certain groups to address the problem of under-representation.

250 B

This is an example of indirect discrimination as it may disadvantage certain groups – such as those who have children.

251 B – FALSE

Positive discrimination is typically illegal.

252 C

'Equal opportunities' is typically required by legislation. Diversity goes beyond this and is an attempt to make the organisation truly inclusive.

253 D

Assessment centre allows a company to test candidates' capability through engaging in role plays, having team-based exercises and doing presentations amongst other things.

254 C

Option C would be an example of positive discrimination, which is not permitted under most legislation.

255 D

To make sure a new recruit becomes effective quickly, he/she needs to be properly introduced into the company by getting to know the colleagues, having a company's policies explained and having a tour of the facilities.

INDIVIDUAL, GROUP AND TEAM BEHAVIOUR

256 D

Role conflict refers to the situation when there is a clash between the roles, such as the role of the employee and role of good auditor.

257 B

Role signs are visible indications of a role, such as styles of dress. Note that 'role definition' is not a key term in role theory.

258

| Statement | True | False |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|--------------|
| Assertive behaviour often leads to conflict within an organisation. | | ✓ |
| Individuals usually join informal groups on a voluntary basis. | ✓ | |

Assertive behaviour involves direct, honest and professional communication. It is aggressive behaviour that violates another person's rights and often leads to additional conflict.

259 A

Teams tend to be slower at making decisions than individuals, as there are more people involved in the decision-making process. This also means that decisions are often compromises when made in teams. However, the involvement of more people in the decision making process means that teams have better control – there are a number of people to review the decisions being made.

260 D

Remember that teams are formal groups. They will be committed to achieving certain targets or objectives. The employees in the scenario are meeting informally for social reasons and are unlikely to be formally committed to the group. Note that options B and C could apply to either groups or teams.

261 A

The other six roles are Monitor-evaluator; Resource investigator; Company worker; Team worker; Finisher and Expert.

262 C

The plant role is played by a creative individual; the monitor-evaluator is good at making accurate judgements, whereas the team worker looks after the atmosphere within the team.

263 B

This is a conflict stage when people start to withdraw their cooperation and therefore jobs are not completed to the expected standard.

264 C

Dorming refers to the danger that the team will be operating on automatic pilot. Tuckman's first four stages are Forming; Storming; Norming and Performing.

265 B

Norming establishes the norms under which the group will operate. This includes how the group will take decisions, behaviour patterns, levels of trust and openness and individual roles.

266 D

The fact that the group has diverse backgrounds may well prove to be an advantage as they will be able to generate a wider range of ideas and bring a variety of skills to the team, improving overall effectiveness.

267 B

The indicators in the prompt that confirm Louis as a completer-finisher include the phrases 'keen eye for detail', identifies minor details in documents that others miss', 'always meets his deadlines' and 'reluctant to involve others'. These are consistent with Belbin's descriptions of the contributions that the completer-finisher can make, as well as possible weaknesses.

Like the completer-finisher, the implementer (or company worker) is disciplined and reliable but is typified by being prepared to take concepts and ideas and then put them into practical effect. The monitor-evaluator considers all alternatives and often displays good judgement, but may lack personal drive. The shaper is good under pressure and challenges the team to achieve its goals.

268 A AND B

Options C and D are incorrect – Peters and Waterman argued that teams should have a limited duration, existing only to achieve a given task and that communication should be unstructured and informal. In addition, they argued that successful teams need to be action-oriented.

MOTIVATING INDIVIDUALS AND GROUPS

269 C

The work of office staff is usually hard to quantify, however they have a significant influence on the income a company generates and therefore it is presumed that they should share a part of the profit.

270 A – TRUE

According to Herzberg, career progression and the status increase that goes with this can act as a motivator.

271 A – TRUE

In the short run you can have one without the other, but in the long run there is usually congruence.

272 D

Content theories focus on what motivates people; they consider that we are all driven by the same set of desires. Process theories encourage a manager to communicate with staff to establish what rewards are of value to them and whether the targets set are achievable and realistic.

273 B

This would meet the need for recognition and status. If an employee is concerned about the loss of their home, they are being motivated by 'basic' needs. Challenging work would fall into Maslow's 'self-fulfilment' category, while regular staff parties would motivate staff members in the 'social' category.

274 C

Large pay rises are a classic 'ego' factor. Pension schemes and permanent contracts will give the employee security, while covering living (or essential) costs is a basic need.

275 C

This allows people to grow personally and professionally by exposing them to higher levels of responsibility and more challenging tasks.

276 B AND C

A would be appropriate to Theory X workers, who must be coerced to get them to make an effort.

For Theory Y workers, a participative, liberating, developmental approach would be appropriate.

277 A

Such people are seen as lazy and will work only if there is a direct link between efforts and rewards.

278 B

This is the definition of hygiene factors.

279 D

Vroom's theory may be stated as $\text{Force} = \text{Valence} \times \text{Expectancy}$.

280 D

Vroom is a process theory, while Kolb's theory relates to learning and is not a theory on motivation.

281 C

A and B are examples of self-fulfilment, while D is a security (or safety) level factor.

282 A – TRUE

Piecework means that employees are paid for each unit they produce. The pay system will therefore tend to encourage staff to produce units as quickly as possible – potentially leading to poor quality. They should therefore be encouraged to ensure the quality of their work is high.

LEARNING AND TRAINING AT WORK

This would be an example of informal learning for the trainee accountant.

Mentoring is an example of informal learning – which is deliberate but not highly structured. Other examples of informal learning include self-directed learning and networking.

284 C

Learning includes the acquisition of a new skill, new knowledge, a modified attitude or a combination of all three.

285 C

The others are: toleration of risk and failure as well as a systematic approach to problem-solving

286 D

Divergent is a style of learning, while the others are the stages in the learning process.

287

| | Pragmatist | Reflector | Activist |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------|------------------|-----------------|
| J dislikes reading instruction booklets and prefers a hands-on approach to learning. | | | ✓ |
| H learns by watching others undertake a task first, before trying to imitate them. | | ✓ | |

Activists prefer to learn through doing. Reflectors prefer observational learning activities.

288 B – FALSE

While Kolb argues that there are four stages to the learning process, they form a cycle which can be started at any stage.

289 A – TRUE

By definition

290 A

An activist is a learner that needs a constant inflow of new ideas. He/she is constantly searching for new challenges and is likely to be exposed to such experiences when interacting with a group.

291 D

A is a theorist, B is a reflector and C is an activist.

292 B

According to Kolb, people who have a clear learning style preference, for whatever reason, will tend to learn more effectively if learning is geared to their preference.

293

| Definition | Training | Education | Development |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------|------------------|--------------------|
| 'The activities which aim at developing skills, values and understanding required in all aspects of life.' | | ✓ | |
| 'The growth or realisation of a person's ability and potential through conscious or unconscious learning.' | | | ✓ |

By definition.

295 C

Review of staff performance and aspirations can be used to identify possible training and development opportunities in the future.

REVIEW AND APPRAISAL OF INDIVIDUAL PERFORMANCE

296 A

Julian has had targets set, but his manager has failed to monitor his performance through the year and provide regular feedback.

297 B

The decision to terminate an employee would not normally be taken at an annual appraisal (except under unusual circumstances).

298 B – FALSE

Assessment criteria may include quantitative issues, such as volume of work produced or qualitative issues, such as personal skills of work quality.

299 A – TRUE

Succession planning refers to preparing the next generation of managers. Appraisal helps to identify the strengths and weaknesses of an individual employee and helps to map the path to taking on a more senior role.

300 A

Ali is trying to persuade Hans that the appraisal is fair and that he should agree with her recommendations. Communication is one way.

301 D

Discharge could be as a result of an employee's unsuitability, disciplinary action or redundancy. Unavoidable may be because of marriage, moving house, illness or death. Avoidable is often due to pay, working conditions or relationships with work colleagues.

302 A

This is an example of discharge as Mary is being dismissed. 'Avoidable' would involve issues with pay or conditions, while 'unavoidable' would include illness or death.

303 B

One should divide the total number of employees leaving the organisation (or the total replacements) by the average number in the workforce.

304 D

Appraisals do not have to be formal to be effective. The final 'F' is fair.

PERSONAL EFFECTIVENESS AT WORK

305 D

This task will become more urgent over the next few weeks

306 D

An established job with set routines should make it easier for Javier to manage his time, as should having a closed-door policy which discourages time-wasters. Having Javier's colleagues in the same office will reduce travelling time and will not be a barrier to time management. However, if Javier finds it difficult to be assertive, he may struggle to deal with colleagues who waste his time.

307 B

The definition given for intranets is actually that of email. Intranets are internal networks that allow employees to access a central store of information.

308 C

Competency frameworks look at skills, knowledge and attitudes needed – not necessarily qualifications.

309 D

Counselling is about helping people to help themselves; it helps people to address their worries and anxieties created by relationships, uncertainty or problems within the individual him/herself.

Counselling is also non-directive; the individual is to decide him/herself what is to be achieved and the best ways to do so.

310

| Definition | Mentoring | Coaching | Counselling |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------|-----------------|--------------------|
| 'The process of offering help, guidance and advice to facilitate the learning and development of another.' | ✓ | | |
| 'Helping another individual to identify and deal with a problem or problems.' | | | ✓ |

311 B

This would be the role of a mentor.

312 B

Tasks should always be prioritised based on the business impact/importance.

313 D

Being effective means getting the result that you want.

There are a variety of planning aids (e.g. electronic personal organisers and hand-held computerised diaries) to support and improve personal productivity.

314 B

The goal of a PDP is to develop the individual themselves.

315 A

They should be SMART – specific, measurable, achievable/attainable, relevant and timely/time-constrained.

316 A

Suppression involves the manager threatening the conflicting employees with punishment, reduction involves negotiating a settlement and resolution involves solving the problem that is the root cause of the conflict.

317 D

Resolution involves solving the problem that is causing the conflict. In this case, Omar has little or no control over access to IT staff, so he is unlikely to be able to resolve the conflict. Denial and suppression tend to be short-term solutions – given that Omar needs a longer term solution, negotiation or reduction would be the most appropriate.

318 A

Make sure that you can identify standard consequences of employee ineffectiveness at work, such as reduced motivation, quality and communication.

COMMUNICATING IN BUSINESS

319 D

A grapevine network connects people who have a common interest and usually circulates rumours and gossip.

Also, Research has established that only 10% of the message is communicated through words, the other 90% is transmitted through non-verbal communication.

320 A

As the employees rarely go onto the intranet, Ian has picked the wrong communication channel. There is no evidence that the message was poorly encoded/structured or that the other members of staff could not understand the message (decode it). There is also no evidence that anything has been interfering with the communication or making it difficult to understand, so noise is not an obvious problem.

321 A – TRUE

Most companies can produce such examples of instructions, control reports, etc which are distributed on the basis of seniority or status. If information is regularly sent out to a set list of people, many of them may find that the information provided is not relevant to them.

322 B – FALSE

Barriers to communication also include anything that stops information from being understood by its recipients or being acted upon in the way intended.

Barriers to communication can be caused by many things, e.g. 'noise' (message confused by extraneous matters); difference in education levels; overload (too much information); distortion of information by the receiver; use of technical or professional language.

323 B

Lateral is another name for horizontal communication, within a committee people from different functions come together to present their view on an issue.

324 C

Options A and B tend to be problems when lateral communication is lacking as this means that management team members are failing to communicate with each other adequately. Option D tends to be an issue when downwards communication is lacking (i.e. managers don't communicate with junior staff members). If junior members of staff are unable to communicate upwards (i.e. to their managers) there will, however, be a lack of participation in decision-making, which may lead to a fall in motivation.

325 D

The communication has been made too late – after work has begun. This will lead to lost time and money for the business.

326 A – TRUE

Information overload is one of the barriers to communication; it makes it difficult to prioritise.

327 C

The wheel was shown to be the quickest way to reach a conclusion.

328 D

Under time pressure the all-channels system either restructures (to form a wheel) or disintegrates.

329 B

The all-channel is the most likely process to reach the best decision.

330 C

Diagonal communication is between individuals or groups at different levels of the hierarchy and in different departments or functions. A is an example of vertical communication, while B and D are examples of lateral communication.

331 B

The wheel has a central individual who controls the flow of communication.

ANSWERS TO MULTI-TASK QUESTIONS

THE BUSINESS ORGANISATION, ITS STAKEHOLDERS AND THE EXTERNAL ENVIRONMENT

1 (a)

| Stakeholder | Internal | Connected |
|--------------------|-----------------|------------------|
| Employees | ✓ | |
| Shareholders | | ✓ |
| Customers | | ✓ |
| Directors | ✓ | |

- (b) (i) F Co is partly owned by H, who is considered to have high power and low interest. F Co has therefore decided to use a keep satisfied strategy to manage this stakeholder.
- (ii) F Co is aware that its actions are regularly commented on by HHH, which would be classified by Mendelow as keep informed. HHH has a high level of interest, but low power.

2

| Stakeholder | A | B | C | D |

| Employee 2 | | ✓ | | |
| Employee 3 | | | | ✓ |
| Employee 4 | ✓ | | | |

4 (a) C, D, F and G are correct.

- (b) (i) BVO has noted that product Y's sales have fallen in recent years due to a fall in disposable income of its major customers. This is evidence that a shift in the demand curve for the product has occurred.
- (ii) BVO sells product Z in country G. Only one other manufacturer sells a similar product in country G, meaning that the two companies dominate the market. Currently, production and sales volumes for these products has reached exactly the same levels, suggesting equilibrium in the market for this product.

5 (a)

| Issue | Delaying | Downsizing | Outsourcing |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------|-------------------|--------------------|
| Could allow third party organisations access to Y's information and processes, leading to loss of competitive advantage. | | | ✓ |
| Keeping the current management structure, but reducing the number of staff could lead to demotivation among the remaining workers. | | ✓ | |
| Eliminating several levels of unnecessary management to reduce Y's costs, leading to lower prices for customers. | ✓ | | |
| This is likely to lead to a more 'team-working' approach, where employees take on different roles in different teams, as necessary. | ✓ | | |

- (b) (i) Y is considering outsourcing some of its call centre activities to GH Co. GH will provide partial outsourcing, with GH operators taking calls from new customers looking to purchase a policy. Y's existing staff will deal with existing customer renewals, queries and complaints.
- (ii) Y has been approached by another company, HG Co, which has offered to provide extra call centre staff in the month of January – which is the busiest time of year for Y. This ad hoc outsourcing would help Y to avoid losing customers due to the long delays customers can face on the phone during this month.

6

| Issue | A | B | C | D | E | F | G | H | I | J |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| MBV's employees are heavily unionised, making it difficult for the company to change their terms and conditions. | | | | | ✓ | | | | | |
| MBV's products are sold through two main retail chains in country G. Each retailer sells approximately equal amounts of MBV's furniture. | | | ✓ | | | | | | | |
| MBV is much larger than any other fine furniture manufacturers in country G, which has given it an advantage due to significant economies of scale. MBV still retails its products at a similar price to its rivals. | | | | | | | | ✓ | | |
| The market for fine furniture in country G is growing very slowly. | | ✓ | | | | | | | | |

(iv) B

- (b) (i) GYY could formalise all roles within the organisation, increasing bureaucracy to ensure that all workers act in a standardised way. Some employees, who are members of a banking union, have complained that such a shift to a machine bureaucracy would lead to significant dissatisfaction amongst GYY's workers.
- (ii) GYY's Board currently makes all strategic decisions for the organisation, with very little control being devolved down to more junior managers. They are concerned that this simple structure will hinder the company's future ability to grow.

13 (a) B, C, E and F are correct.

(b) The correct statements are: A, D and E

- 38 (i) Samuel is considering the launch of a new policy that ensures that all members of staff are given an appropriate level of pay by formalising the grade boundaries of all staff. This will make pay fairer and will act as a hygiene factor for workers, hopefully reducing staff turnover.
- (ii) Samuel has informed all managers within UHPD that they will be expected to delegate some responsibility down to more capable junior staff to improve UHPD's employee job design. Samuel referred to this in his report as job enrichment.
- (iii) Samuel has identified four managers within UHPD that have received high levels of complaints from their staff. They have adopted an authoritarian management style, assuming that employees are Theory X. In fact, this is not the case and this mismatch in style has caused significant morale problems.
- (iv) Samuel has decided against job rotation within UHPD as he is concerned that if staff are regularly moved between departments, their overall efficiency will drop.

5 Below is information on four different companies.

Company 1 enjoys very rapid decision making, but there are extremely limited opportunities for staff members to gain promotions, which many employees find de-motivating.

Company 2 has a highly flexible structure, but dual command has led to conflict between managers who have overlapping authority.

Company 3 enjoys significant economies of scale, but cannot easily cope with diversification into new products or markets.

Company 4 is split into several strategic business units – each related to a particular product that the company makes. While this has allowed the company to diversify, it has led to a lack of overall goal congruence within the company.

The following are organisational structures:

SECTION A

1 C

A limited liability company is classed as a separate legal entity from its owners. The owners (shareholders) may be different to the managers (Board of Directors). A shareholder's liability is limited to their investment.

A partnership is different to a limited company in that there is no separate legal entity.

Sole traders have unlimited liability for business debts as they are classed as the same legal entity as the business.

There is no restriction on the number of partners in a partnership agreement.

2 B

The company is targeting its goods and services to a distinct group of people. This would be classified as a focus, or niche market, strategy.

3 B

Psychologically close managers tend to adopt close relations with their subordinates and therefore are people-orientated and prefer informal contact rather than more formal communication methods.

4 C

The disseminator transmits factual and value based information to subordinates.

The liaison develops and maintains a network of external contacts.

The monitor gathers internal and external information relevant to the organisation.

The spokesperson communicates to the outside world on the performance and policies of the organisation.

5 C

If a government increased its expenditure and reduced levels of taxation the effect would be to stimulate demand in the economy and to increase the size of the Public Sector Net Cash Requirement (PSNCR).

Demand would be stimulated as firms and households would have more money after tax for investment/consumption or saving. The increased public expenditure would not be covered by an increase in tax revenue and would therefore have to be financed by increasing government borrowing, the PSNCR.

6 B

In order to be classified as a profession, there must be enforced compliance with an appropriate ethical code.

7 D

According to Herzberg's theory only training is a motivator. The others are all hygiene factors – the absence of which will cause dissatisfaction but their presence will not lead to long-term motivation. Note that staff bonuses (in addition to their salaries) could be a motivator if they are used to recognise good performance.

8 A

The span of control is the number of people for whom a manager is directly responsible.

Scalar chain relates to the number of management levels within an organisation.

9 C

A non-executive director must not have been an employee of the organisation in the last five years and should not have had a material business interest in the company in the last three years. They should also not participate in the company's share options or pension schemes.

10

| Stakeholders | Internal | External | Connected |
|---------------------|-----------------|-----------------|------------------|
| Government | | ✓ | |
| Shareholders | | | ✓ |

11 C

Recession is part of the business cycle when demand for output and therefore employees falls so unemployment rises.

A is an example of seasonal unemployment.

B is technological unemployment.

D is an example of real wage unemployment.

12 D

All options could influence the culture of an organisation. History and experiences allow the company to learn from past successes and failures, successes will be built on and failures not repeated. Senior management influence current objectives and ways of working. The person who founded the organisation establishes the basic assumptions and values of the organisation. The technology used and the industry both influence the way an organisation operates.

13 A

Negotiation involves coming up with a compromise where both parties get some (but not all) of what they want. This is likely to act as a long-term solution to a major conflict. Denial and suppression are both short-term solutions as they do not involve any attempt to deal with the root cause of the problem.

14 A

Job enrichment involves offering existing staff higher-level, possibly managerial level, tasks. This will not only help train the employee, making them more capable and therefore improving succession planning, but will also make them feel more valued and interested in their jobs, improving motivation. It is unlikely to reduce employee's wages and could, in fact, eventually lead to the employee demanding higher wages to compensate them for the additional work they are having to undertake.

15 A

Its price elasticity of demand (PED) would be less than one. If a product is inelastic, the number of units demanded will change more slowly than the sales price. This gives a PED of less than 1.

16 C

It is good corporate governance for an internal audit department to report to the audit committee, which should consist of non-executive directors, in order to increase their independence.

17 B

By definition. Note that C is redundancy.

18 A

Porter's five forces model identified the following factors that determine the attractiveness of an industry:

- Bargaining power of buyers
- Bargaining power of suppliers
- Competitive rivalry
- New entrants to the industry
- Substitute products or services

19 B

A minimum price would tend to cause an excess of supply in the market. In this case, that would tend to mean excess labour in the market – leading to higher unemployment. This is particularly likely as the minimum wage level is set above the current wage level. This may mean that businesses reduce the number of employees they hire, to maintain their profits.

20 Executive information systems pool data from internal and external sources and make information available to senior managers for unstructured decisions.

21 D

Fines, prosecution, difficulties raising finance, a damaged reputation and a qualified audit report are all possible consequences of compliance failure. An unqualified audit report is given when, in the auditors' opinion, the financial statements provide a true and fair impression of the financial position of the organisation.

22

- (1) Standard cost card
- (2) Statement of financial position
- (3) Variance report

Make sure you are able to identify the contents of the main financial and management reports produced by the accounts department.

23

Managers are said to have a fiduciary responsibility (or duty of faithful service) to the organisations that they serve.

Fiduciary means 'of trust'. All managers are accountable for their actions.

24 A

Committees often slow decision making down as they involve discussion and negotiation between all the members.

25 D

All of the above would raise ethical issues. Materials used impacts on the safety of the product. Quality is a safety issue. Advertising raises issues of truth and manipulation. The treatment and potential exploitation of labour, whether directly employed by a business or its suppliers, is also an ethical issue.

26

| | Correct | Incorrect |
|-------------------------------------------------|----------------|------------------|
| Increased materials cost | ✓ | |
| Failure to attract and retain quality employees | | ✓ |

CSR is likely to attract good quality employees and should not lead to a loss of key skills within the organisation. However, goods need to be purchased from ethical sources, which may lead to a rise in their cost. It can also take up significant amounts of management time, which could have been used to increase business profits.

27 C

Formal systems will ensure that all transactions are recorded the same way. If all staff adopt the 'best practice' approach to using the system, efficiency will increase. Note that new staff will still need to be trained in how to use the system and the quality of the systems will have no bearing on whether the organisation requires an external audit or not – though it may make an audit easier and therefore cheaper!

28 C

Tax evasion is illegal. Tax avoidance is used to describe schemes that frustrate the intentions of Parliament, while tax mitigation describes schemes that do not frustrate the intentions of Parliament.

29 A

Orchestration is not a conflict management strategy – the other three are.

30

| Statement | True | False |
|--------------------------------------------|-------------|--------------|
| Overstating overtime worked is unethical. | ✓ | |
| Overstating overtime worked is fraudulent. | ✓ | |

Overstating overtime is fraudulent as it is a subtle form of theft of funds from an organisation as an individual would be claiming pay for hours not worked. This would also clearly be unethical.

31 A

Education is a way of providing skills that will generally benefit a person in their general life. Training and development are both more focused on providing skills that will be needed for existing and future roles within the organisation.

32 A

The other component of internal control is 'control activities'.

33 B

In the wheel all communication goes through one central person. In the 'Y' a message works up a chain until it reaches an individual who is contact with more than one person. In the all channel, communication flows freely between members. In the circle, a message passes from one person to another.

34 A

The appraiser told David where he was going wrong but did not give any assistance or guidance to help David improve his future performance. The 'tell and listen' approach encourages input from the individual. The problem solving approach is where the appraiser and appraisee work together to identify problems and jointly find solutions. The 360 degree approach uses feedback from managers, subordinates and peers to review an individual's performance.

35 A

By definition.

36 B

Yan sees her relationship with her team as a simple transaction – she offers benefits in return for their obedience and compliance.

37 C

A task culture tends to exist in organisations whose members work in teams with a focus on results rather than processes.

A role culture suits bureaucratic organisations. A power culture is often seen in small entrepreneurial organisations where the owner-manager has all the power and control. A person culture exists in professional partnerships.

38

| Statement | True | False |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|--------------|
| To establish the causes of errors and omissions in financial records. | | ✓ |
| To identify errors and omissions in financial records. | ✓ | |

Substantive tests 'substantiate' the figures in the accounts. They are used to discover whether figures are correct or complete, not why they are incorrect or incomplete.

39 D

Sexual harassment is unwanted conduct of a sexual nature.

Victimisation is when a person is penalised because they are involved in a claim of discrimination against an employer.

Direct discrimination is when a person or group of people are clearly discriminated against e.g. a job advert stating women cannot apply for a job. Indirect discrimination is when a person or group would find it more difficult to meet criteria set by an organisation e.g. a job advert requesting individuals over 6 feet tall suggests women cannot apply.

These are all typical roles of a supervisor.

41 A

Typically such an unethical activity needs to be reported to whoever is responsible for dealing with ethical problems within the company. If Louise is unable to get a satisfactory resolution from them, she could discuss the matter with the ACCA. Resignation is normally the final resort.

42 B

A contract to undertake an illegal action cannot be legally binding. In this case, it would not be legal to forbid an employee to report fraud.

43 B

A skimming scheme occurs when a fraudster diverts small amounts from a large number of transactions. As such, it could occur anywhere within the organisation.

44 C

By definition. Hollow organisations outsource non-core functions, while virtual organisations outsource almost all functions – whether core or not.

45 A

A wide span of control means that each manager looks after many staff members. This is easier if the staff members are skilled and motivated as they will require little supervision. However, if staff are widely spread or have to undertake complex tasks, it will be harder for a manager to look after them meaning that the span of control will tend to narrow.

46 C

The information is relevant to the company's A1000 production. There is no evidence that the information is imprecise or that it is not cost effective – note that information does not have to be low cost to be good quality. However, as it was received AFTER production commenced, it was not timely and will therefore only be of limited usefulness.

Write down which two of the above are those functions identified by Fayol by selecting TWO of the letters from (A, B, C, D, E). (2 marks)

(Total: 4 marks)

- 2 (a) XYZ Company installed a computer system to handle its main accounting functions including accounts receivables, accounts payables and payroll. Management has a number of concerns about access to the system and are considering a number of controls to overcome those concerns.

The following are types of control they are considering:

- A General control
- B Application control

Required:

Classify the following as either A (General control) or B (Application control):

- (i) Locking the computer room to prevent access to non-employees.
- (ii) Limiting access to the payroll system by making it password protected.
- (iii) Taking backup of data files each evening and holding backup copies off-premises.
- (iv) Providing basic IT training to the entire staff to prevent errors in using the system.

Note: The total marks will be split equally between each part. (2 marks)

- (b) A company has considerable cash collections on a regular basis. The cashier receives the cash, records it and then banks it at the end of each day. Since a single person is responsible for access to cash, the financial director is concerned that fraud and error may occur in cash handling and recording. He proposes use of appropriate internal controls to prevent any such errors or misappropriations.

The following are specific examples of internal controls used in business:

- A Segregation of duties
- B Induction and training
- C Authorisation limit
- D Internal audit

The following sentences contain gaps which specify the appropriate internal control which could be used to prevent fraud and errors.

Fraud and errors in handling cash can be prevented through 1 since no one individual could record and process a complete transaction.

Required:

- (i) Select the correct internal control which appropriately fills gap 1 above; i.e. select A, B, C or D. (1 mark)

Even if such a measure were introduced, the possibility exists that staff could act together to perpetrate fraud and bypass this control. This can be prevented through 2 as it would ensure awareness of the heavy sanctions to be imposed in cases of dishonesty.

- (ii) Select the correct internal control which appropriately fills gap 2 above; i.e. select A, B, C or D. (1 mark)

(Total: 4 marks)

- 3 There are a number of ways of developing staff on a one-to-one basis within organisations. Each has its own strengths and weaknesses and is appropriate in different work situations.

Examples of types of development include coaching, mentoring, counselling and appraising.

Required:

- (a) For each type of development below, which work situation is most appropriate?

- A An interview to help another person to identify and work through a problem.
- B A longer term relationship in which a more experienced person encourages an individual's personal and career development.
- C An approach whereby a trainee is put under the guidance of an experienced employee who shows the trainee how to perform tasks.
- D An interview, the aim of which is to review performance and identify training and development needs.

(i) Coaching. Select ONE of A, B, C or D

(ii) Mentoring. Select ONE of A, B, C or D

(iii) Counselling. Select ONE of A, B, C or D

(iv) Appraising. Select ONE of A, B, C or D

Note: The total marks will be split equally between each part. (2 marks)

- (b) An organisation uses mentoring as a form of one-to-one personal development.

- A Determine remuneration
- B Decide promotions
- C Career and personal development
- D Resolve a grievance
- E Demonstrating how to perform
- F Using experienced staff for training
- G Providing a role model for an employee

Required:

Which TWO of the above are benefits of this approach? Select TWO from (A, B, C, D, E, F, G). (2 marks)

(Total: 4 marks)

- 4 Sport-4-Kidz is a charitable organisation that operates a sports centre in a large city.

The land on which the playing fields and facilities are located is held on behalf of the charity by Donna and Dietmar, the two trustees. Donna and Dietmar simply hold the land on behalf of Sport-4-Kidz and play no role in running the charity. They are rarely contacted by the management of the charity. However, they are the only people who are able to enter into contracts in relation to the land and its use.

Sport-4-Kidz is managed and operated by a management committee. The committee has decided on a major expansion of facilities by building a new sports hall. The committee has the power to legally bind the charity in all matters other than the land. Their decisions are overseen by the government charity regulator, which generally sanctions the charity's decisions except in relation to financial reporting.

The management committee is negotiating with four building companies.

The proposed expansion of the facilities has angered the local residents, many of whom are concerned about heavy building site traffic and the danger posed to their children. Many believe that the design of the new sports hall is ugly and insensitive. Three well-respected local politicians serve on the residents' committee.

(a) The following are types of stakeholder:

- A Internal stakeholder
- B External stakeholder
- C Connected stakeholder

Required:

For each of the following, indicate whether they are internal, connected or external stakeholders.

- (i) Donna and Dietmar. Select one of A, B or C
- (ii) Members of the management committee. Select one of A, B or C
- (iii) The four building companies. Select one of A, B or C
- (iv) Local residents. Select one of A, B or C

Note: The total marks will be split equally between each part. (2 marks)

(b) Complete the following sentences about Sport-4-Kidz stakeholders, with reference to Mendelow's grid.

The local residents exert 1 and should be 2

(i) Select which ONE of the following fills Gap 1:

- A high power, low interest
- B high power, high interest
- C low power, low interest
- D low power, high interest

Write down A, B, C or D.

(ii) Select which ONE of the following fills Gap 2:

- A treated as a key player
- B kept satisfied
- C kept informed

Write down A, B, or C.

The building companies exert 3 and should be 4

(iii) Select which ONE of the following fills Gap 3:

- A high power, low interest
- B high power, high interest
- C low power, low interest
- D low power, high interest

Write down A, B, C or D.

(iv) Select which ONE of the following fills Gap 4:

- A treated as a key player
- B kept satisfied
- C kept informed

Write down A, B, or C.

Note: The total marks will be split equally between each part. (2 marks)

(Total: 4 marks)

- 5 Accounting bodies set out a code of ethics to establish ethical behaviour requirements for professional accountants.

(a) The following are qualities you might see in a professional at work:

| | |
|---------------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| Integrity A | Honesty B |
| Trustworthiness C | Expertise D |
| Professional behaviour E | Confidentiality F |
| Respectfulness G | Objectivity H |

Required:

Write down which of the FOUR boxes from (A–H) contain fundamental principles of ethical behaviour from the IFAC (IESBA) and ACCA codes of ethics. (2 marks)

(b) The following are desirable characteristics of professions and vocations:

- A Acting in the public interest
- B Highly skilled
- C Ethical codes of conduct
- D Governance by association
- E Highly valued services
- F Training requirement
- G Process of certification
- H Qualification by examination

Required:

Select FOUR of the characteristics from the list above, which distinguish a profession from an occupation. (2 marks)

(Total: 4 marks)

- 6 Company A is an accountancy professional body which has a tall structure and a high level of centralisation. The span of control is very narrow. Subordinates have minimal latitude for self-determination or to influence decision-making and mainly concentrate on carrying out highly prescribed and defined roles.

Company B is a financial services company which gives a wide ranging role to its traders and promotes cultural values such as assertiveness, risk appetite, and a high degree of competition between employees. The employees are usually young and unmarried, and work and socialise together for long hours at a frenetic pace.

Company C is a research and development company where the business is divisionalised by product. Staff work very flexibly and often need to communicate laterally to achieve objectives through ad hoc projects and collaboration. There are no formal rules about reporting structures, or about set starting or finishing times. Staff are rewarded on the basis of creativity and innovation.

Company D is a family company which is highly controlled by the owners and the CEO is the main shareholder. There is a very low staff turnover, but employees are expected to be very loyal to the company and are often required to work long hours and carry out tasks outside their normal range of duties. Relationships between employees and managers are very informal and close and the rights of employees and their overall interests are strongly defended by the owners when challenged.

The following are dimensions used by Hofstede to classify types of organisational culture:

| | | 1. High | 2. Low |
|---|-----------------------|---------|--------|
| A | Power distance | A1 | A2 |
| B | Uncertainty avoidance | B1 | B2 |
| C | Individualism | C1 | C2 |
| D | Masculinity | D1 | D2 |

Required:

- (i) For Company A select which combination of dimensions apply from the grid above.
(For example A1) (1 mark)
- (ii) For Company B select which combination of dimensions apply from the grid above.
(For example A1) (1 mark)
- (iii) For Company C select which combination of dimensions apply from the grid above.
(For example A1) (1 mark)
- (iv) For Company D select which combination of dimensions apply from the grid above.
(For example A1) (1 mark)

Section 8

SPECIMEN EXAM ANSWERS

Section A

1 B

The IASB aims to promote consistency in corporate reporting by creating financial reporting standards to which major businesses are expected to adhere.

2 B

The Ashridge model identifies four styles: autocratic; authoritarian; consultative; laissez-faire (or participative). The first of these is the least participative.

3 B

Negotiation gives the best opportunity for the two sides in a conflict to converge their positions. The other options either involve backing down, forcing a position, potentially increasing conflict, or leaving the issue unresolved.

4 B

Mentors usually help staff on broader work related development, including orientation and induction. Coaches work on developing specific skills of the job itself, while counsellors work with people on a personal level, perhaps if they are having non-work related or emotional problems.

5 C

The board of directors are responsible for the well-being of a wide group of constituencies, including shareholders, but also employees and other internal, external and connected stakeholders.

6 A

Because of the particular circumstances of the scenario where someone is made redundant from an industry in decline where skills cannot be easily transferred, where re-training might take a long time or where work is not available in the short term within a reasonable geographic proximity, this is classed as structural unemployment.

7 B

The basic principle that underlies marketing is that it is a management process that identifies and anticipates customer needs. The other distracters in the question refer to specific activities undertaken by a marketing function.

8 C

The normal sanctions in such a case is that fines are imposed on companies by the registration body of the company and, where listed, the company may be delisted by the stock exchange authorities. Although the option wasn't included, sanctions against responsible directors may also be imposed.

9 D

The ageing population trend is caused by a decreasing birth rate and a decreasing mortality rate.

10 B

The 'tell and listen' approach encourages input from the individual, promoting participation in the process by the appraisee.

11 B

The external auditor has to ensure that the financial statements of the organisation truly reflect the activities of the business in the relevant accounting period. This assessment should be independent and therefore free from subjectivity on the part of the management of the client organisation.

12 B

Annual targets and management forecasts from performance appraisals indicate medium term planning horizons which are both tactical in nature, whereas product development plans for 2–3 years are longer term strategic objectives.

13 A

An employee with a range of tasks or objectives to achieve and pressures to achieve them to set deadlines, should always prioritise tasks in accordance to business importance. Deciding on other criteria such as pressure applied by colleagues, whether someone is absent or not or simply because a task is urgent may damage wider business objectives.

14 D

A professional accountant acting in accordance with fundamental ethical principles is demonstrating objectivity when they give a complete and precise view, which by implication means that negative aspects should not be concealed or positive aspects accentuated.

15 C

IFAC has no legal powers against businesses, nor does it set financial reporting standards. It is an accounting association member body which promotes educational and ethical standards of behaviour amongst its member bodies, through a code of ethics and behaviour, but does not prescribe detailed rules on this.

16 C

Increasing taxation leaves individuals with less disposable income for expenditure within the economy thereby slowing economic activity. The same effect is caused by a reduction in government expenditure. Therefore economic activity can be stimulated by reducing taxation and increasing government expenditure.

17 C

Information on purchase costs of finished goods or raw materials is important in establishing the price of a product. In terms of the marketing mix, this information is most relevant to the price element as prices should be set at least to cover cost and give an acceptable level of profit.

18 B

As the test is needed to test specific skills, competence testing is most appropriate. Intelligence and psychometric tests are intended to assess innate ability or psychological traits, which are more general.

19 D

The key correctly matches the information required to the particular financial statement in which they are to be found.

20 A

The pluralist solution is to cater for the needs of more than one stakeholder group without seriously compromising the interests of any individual group. Therefore setting aside a special area for families with children while having an adults only section would achieve this. The other options involve adversely affecting the rights of one or other group of stakeholders in some way.

21 B

Data protection legislation is formulated to protect the interests of data subjects who are private individuals. Not all data is regulated.

22 A

A transaction processing system enables all sales and purchase transactions to be recorded by volume and category.

23 B

B is correct because customers and suppliers deal closely on a transactional basis with the organisation, but are not internal stakeholders like managers and executive directors.

24 A

Where price inflation is high the value of money reduces consistently over time. Those who owe money (debtors) therefore pay back less capital in real terms, and interest rates seldom adjust adequately to compensate for this.

25 A

Role playing exercises are most effectively used for skills development, including sales training. Other common business applications include effective selection interviewing and performance appraisal interviewing.

26 B

The Blake and Mouton managerial grid enables leadership styles to be categorised on a nine point scale with reference to concern for production and concern for people. Renata is therefore highly concerned with the task and much less interested in her team as individuals.

27 B

The implementation of a budgetary control system would be the responsibility of the financial controller in many organisations. The internal auditor is not responsible for implementing systems, but is involved in monitoring the effectiveness of these systems.

28 C

The external auditor is responsible for ensuring that financial reports portray a true and fair view and comply with legal disclosure requirements. External auditors are not responsible for ensuring that systems exist to prevent fraud.

29 A

Integrity is about honesty and applying morality to business and professional behaviour. A person acting with integrity should not be corruptible. Neutrality in the making of business decisions does not indicate morality nor does producing accurate work, which is more about professional competence.

30 B

Only shareholders have voting power related to the number of shares that they own. Members of a co-operative organisation can vote but will only have one vote. Co-operatives may be owned by members, but ownership stakes cannot be exchanged between members unless the members belong to limited companies.

31 B

To discriminate against someone on the grounds of characteristics which are predominately associated with their sex, gender, nationality or religion is illegal. As women are generally shorter than men, to restrict admission on the basis of height, indirectly discriminates against women. The other options are either direct discrimination, or other illegal and undesirable employment practices.

32 B

According to Herzberg, money is a hygiene factor (or dissatisfier). Although it is a powerful short-term motivator, it is questionable whether each individual increase in monetary reward will have a major long-term effect. According to Herzberg, 'A reward once given becomes a right'.

33 B

The task culture is appropriate where organisations can accommodate the flexibility required to adjust management and team structures to address the tasks that must be fulfilled. This is very common in large consultancy firms.

34 D

The wheel facilitates transmission of the message directly to all receivers and therefore transmits most quickly.

35 C

Both parties in a two way communication link will need to encode messages and both have to decode them for them to be understood. The other options imply that only one party encodes messages.

36 B

Equal opportunity policies widen opportunity and enlarge the potential pool of employees to recruit from. The other options either indirectly or directly reduce the potential for staff turnover and therefore limit the number of job vacancies available at any point in time.

37 D

The primary aim of a public oversight board is to eliminate or minimise any actual or potential breaches of legislative requirements and to ensure compliance with regulations applicable to organisations within their terms of reference.

38 C

Scientific management principles consider the ways in which the factors of production (land, labour, capital and the entrepreneurial function) can be combined to maximise efficiency in production. The founding principles are based on the work of Frederick Winslow Taylor. The reorganisation of the call centre follows these principles.

39 C

The components of effective demand in the economy are consumer spending, investment by enterprises, central and local government expenditure and the net gains from international trade.

40 A

The four Ps are Product, Price, Promotion and Place.

41 B

Decentralisation devolves authority to lower levels and gives more autonomy to individuals and teams. Decentralisation on the other hand increases risk as there is less control over individual and group behaviour and decision-making. Allowing more freedom to act independently leads to less consistency across the organisation.

42 A

Compliance with legal requirements may not eliminate unethical behaviour. The issues of concern to those who complain may not be fully representative of issues of concern to customers in general. Other companies in the sector may not be concerned about ethical behaviour.

43 C

Using SWOT analysis, the way to conduct this analysis would be for the individual to consider their own strengths and weaknesses and how they could affect the impression given to others. The other options are external factors to the individual so would not directly affect the opinion that others would have of that individual.

44 B

As new members are about to join the group, essentially the group is reforming which is the start of a new group development process. The other options are all later stages in group development as identified by Tuckman.

45 A

Teeming and lading involves the theft of cash and is a type of fraud that is carried out by manipulating transactions. There would be most potential for this fraud within the sales department where cash may be received and remitted.

46 B

The demand curve of a company in a perfect market is horizontal, because they can sell as much as they want at a given market price and nothing at all at a price set higher than the prevailing market price.
